I am the good shepherd: the good shepherd giveth his life for the sheep. St. John 10, 11.

Faith, Hope and Charity

"Faith, hope and charity, these three; but the greatest of these is charity," wrote Saint Paul in his First Epistle to the Corinthians, that great book which has been described as the Magna Charta of the Christian.

There never has been a time in the history of America when these three essential qualities of the good life were so manifest as they are today in our everyday affairs. We as a people are just beginning to emerge from the most serious and long-drawn-out period of calamity and depression which we have ever experienced.

A less sturdy people than ours would have yielded ere this to despair. A less law-abiding people would have relapsed into banditry, as so many of China's millions have done.

parate mobs pillaging the stores of supplies. In the face of all that we have been going through there has been no note of despondency.

We have kept the faith; we have not lost our belief in the ultimate return of the old prosperity; we still look upon this country of ours as the greatest and most favored of nations and we have clung to the hope that, sooner or later, somehow, in ways which we cannot quite clearly foresee but which our faith tells us will surely operate for good, all will be well again. We have not lost hope.

And while we have held to the faith and clung to hope, we have been giving, and still are giving, the finest example of charity in all history. Without excitement, without pressure beyond the mere spreading of the word that help was needed, we have given not merely the ten million dollars that the Red Cross asked for but millions beyond that, to feed the hungry, clothe the naked and succor the homeless; and we are still giving. All of the machinery of our governments, state and national, has been geared to relieve the distress of the less fortunate among us.

The picture of the people of the United States which this situation reveals is one of which we may well be proud. We have proved again to ourselves, what some had begun to doubt, that we have not cut loose from the ancient, imperishable virtues; that they still rule our hearts and guide our conduct.

THEATRE NOTES

When wise-cracker meets wise-cracker in Hollywood, they make a comedy. So, when Jack Oakie met George Marion, Jr., they made "Sea Legs," the feature at the Oasis theatre for Sunday and Monday, March 15 and 16.

Oakie and Marion are known as Hollywood's keenest wits. Both deal in wise-cracks. Marion writes them.

U. of O. Debaters

Arthur Potwin of Albany (left) and Robert T. Miller of Pendleton constitute the University of Oregon debating team which is on a tour of the Pacific Northwest to engage in forensic contests with universities and colleges in that district.

Oakie talks them. Yet, only in their humor are the two alike. Oakie is always smiling, when he isn't laughing. There are those who claim to have seen Marion smile, but he is usually soberfaced. When Oakie is around, everyone knows it. He shouts greetings, exchanges jokes, and can't walk ten feet without being hailed by that many people. Marion is quiet and reserved, does most of his work at home. Watching his comedies being filmed, he stands in an unobtrusive place, like a silent sentinel.

In April, 1830, the first wagon train left St. Louis for the Oregon country. Early this year Congress authorized national commemoration of this epoch and President Hoover issued a proclamation calling upon the American people to observe this important event.

The first concrete response to the President's proclamation came from Itaouli Walsh, Fox Film director, advising the nation's chief executive that during April, 1930, he would start production of "The Big Trail" the most important picture ever produced, and upon its completion would dedicate it to the memory of the pioneers who, one hundred years ago, braved the dangers and hardships of the trail to the west.

"The Big Trail" opens Thursday, Friday and Saturday at the Oasis theatre.

A Tennessee reformer has received approval of his ideas from an unexpected source. Crusading for Sunday observance, he wrote a large number of railroad presidents asking that Sunday trains be abolished. Thinking him a crank, none replied except President F. D. Atterbury of the Erie, who said he "would be delighted to abolish Sunday trains, because they lose money."

More than 73,000 miles in a New Ford

THE substantial worth of the new Ford is reflected in its good performance, economy and reliability. Its stamina and endurance are particularly apparent in sections where bad roads and severe weather put a heavy extra burden on the automobile. In less than a year a new Ford Tudor Sedan was driven more than seventy-three thousand miles over a difficult route. The operating cost per mile was very low and practically the only expense for repairs was for new piston rings and a new bearing for the generator. The car carried an average load of 1200 pounds of mail and was driven 250 miles daily. "The Ford has never failed to go when I was ready," writes one of the three mail carriers operating the car. "The starter did the trick last winter even at 34 degrees below zero. The gas runs about 20 miles per gallon. At times I pull a trailer whenever I have a bulky load." Many other Ford owners report the same satisfactory performance. Every part has been made to endure - to serve you faithfully and well for many thousands of miles.

LOW PRICES OF FORD CARS $430 to $630

FEATURES OF THE NEW FORD Attractive lines and colors, rich, long-wearing upholstery, sturdy steel body construction, Triplex shatter-proof glass windshield, silent, fully enclosed four-wheel brakes, four Houdaille double-acting hydraulic shock absorbers, aluminum pistons, chrome silicon alloy valves, torque-tube drive, three-quarter floating rear axle, more than twenty ball and roller bearings, and bright, enduring Rustless Steel for many exterior metal parts. In addition, you save many dollars because of the low first cost of the Ford, low cost of operation and up-keep and low yearly depreciation.
