OREGON EARLY SPRING LAMB CROP OF 1931 REPORTED GOOD

The early lamb crop of 1931 in Oregon as a whole is somewhat larger than the early crop of 1930 according to the March 1 report of the Federal Crop Reporting Service. Weather conditions were exceptionally favorable for saving a large percentage of lambs. Feed is plentiful but rain is needed in some areas to insure spring feed.

In the principal early lambing states, the lamb crop is larger than that of last year. The condition of the early lambs at the beginning of March this year was better than at that date in 1930, when a high condition was reported. Present indications are for a larger market supply of spring lambs than last year for the three months April, May and June, the quality of which will be at least as good as last year. A heavy marketing of grass fat yearlings and weathers from Texas during these months is also probable.

A report from Umatilla, Baker, Union and Wallowa counties brings the following statement: "Lambing is just getting a good start. No green feed in this part of the state. Mild, dry winter means a larger percentage of lambs saved than normal but owing to drought, prospects for the future of these lambs is very uncertain. Unless we get an excess of moisture from now on, lambs will probably lack weight to equal the increase in number."

CHILD DEVELOPMENT STUDIED BY GROUPS AT CONFERENCE

When five or six-year-old Billy starts bringing his playmates' toys home with him, don't get excited and think your son is developing criminal tendencies. He isn't. He is merely passing through one of the natural growth stages which 85 per cent of the children in the world go through at that age, and the less attention you pay to it the better. Don't accuse him of anything, but simply have him return the article.

This was just one of the pertinent bits of information brought out at the three day conference on Child Development and Parent Education in which more than 200 parent and members of such organizations as the Oregon Congress of Parents and Teachers, and American Association of University women took part under the auspices of the school of economics at Oregon State college.

New problems, both physical and psychological, of the normal present day child, and new developments in parent-child relations were emphasized at conference, which marked Oregon's first attempt to disseminate a part of the information brought out at the recent White House Conference on Child Welfare and Protection at Washington, D. C.

Plans for cooperative effort to further child development and parent education throughout the state were formulated by each of the groups represented. This will take the form of district conferences sponsored by the home economics department of the college extension service, organization of community groups for study of child-parent problems, greater emphasis on this phase of home economics work in high schools throughout the state, and the holding of training schools to develop lay leaders in this field.

THE DEBTOR'S PRAYER

To My Creditors: I wish to inform you that the present shattered condition of my bank account makes it impossible for me to send you a check in response to your request.

My present financial condition is due to the Federal Laws, State Laws, County Laws, Brother-in-Laws, Mother-in-Laws and Outlaws that have been foisted upon an unsuspecting public. Through the various Laws, I have been held down, held up, walked on, sat upon, flattened out and squeezed until I do not know where I am, what I am or why I am.

The Laws compel me to pay a merchant tax, capital stock tax, excise tax, income tax, real estate tax, auto tax, gas tax, light tax, cigar tax, street tax, school tax, syntax and carpet tax.

In addition to these taxes, I am requested and required to contribute to every society and organization that the inventive mind of man can organize. To the society of St. John the Baptist, Woman Relief, the Navy Relief, the Children's Home, the Policemen's Benefit, the Morons' Society, the Y.M.C.A., the Boy Scouts, the Jewish Relief, the Near East, the Gold Diggers' Home, also every hospital and every charitable institution in town, the Red Cross and the Black Cross, the White Cross, the Purple Cross and the Double Cross.

The Government has so governed my business that I do not know who owns it. I am suspected, inspected, disrespected, examined, re-examined, informed, required, commanded and compelled until all I know is that I am supposed to provide an inexhaustible supply of money for every known need, desire or hope of the human race, and because I refuse to donate to all and go out and beg, borrow and steal money to give away I am cursed and discussed, boycotted, talked to, talked about, held to, lied about, held up, held down, and robbed, until I am nearly ruined, so the only reason I am clinging to life is to see what the hell is coming next.

Yours very truly, OWEN U. MOORE. —The Jewelry Trade News.

World's Great Debt to Little Town of Athens

Five hundred years before Christ, in a little town on the far western border of the settled and civilized world, a strange new power was at work. Something had awakened in the minds and spirits of the men there which was so to influence the world that the slow passage of long time, of century upon century and the shattering changes they brought, would be powerless to wear away that deep impress.

Athens had entered upon her brief and magnificent flowering of genius which so molded the world of mind and of spirit that our mind and spirit today are different. We think and feel differently because of what a little Greek town did during a century or two, 2,400 years ago. What was then produced of art and of thought has never been surpassed and very rarely equaled, and the stamp of it is upon all art and all the thought of the western world. And yet this full stature of greatness came to pass at a time when the mighty civilizations of the ancient world had perished and the shadow of "effortless barbarism" was dark upon the earth. In that black and fierce world a little center of white-hot spiritual energy was at work. A new civilization had risen in Athens, unlike all that had gone before.—From "The Greek Way," by Edith Hamilton.

Forest Monarchs Yield to Relentless Years

Many of the oak trees in Windsor park are at least a thousand years old. Some were quite big when William the Conqueror came to these islands, and many date back to the days of Alfred the Great and Canute.

Recently some of these veterans have had to be felled, for though they still bore their array of leaves and acorns year by year they were becoming dangerous to the public.

The oak is the sturdiest of our trees. For centuries it continues to grow, and the wood of its trunk remains hard and healthy. But when old age sets in the middle of the wood begins to decay, and in time little more is left than the shell of the trunk supporting the mighty weight of the great branches. Even so, the tree may stand for a long time after its trunk has become no more than a hollow tube. But when great holes begin to develop near the base of the oak it becomes dangerous.

The king is ranger of Windsor park and Windsor forest. Recently he had to give permission for the felling of eight of the oldest giants, which old age had reduced to mere skeletons.—London Tit-Bits.

Silver Fox Fur

The name silver fox, as commonly used by furriers, includes the dark phases of the ordinary red fox, variously called silver, silver-gray, silver-black or black. The color of the red fox of the northeastern states and of its allies of the colder parts of North America varies from red to black, and these extremes, with the gradation between them, form four more or less distinct phases, known, respectively, as red, cross or patch, silver and black. The silver fox, therefore, is a color phase of the red fox.

New York's Famous "Bowery"

The Bowery used to be a farm or a plantation, and was so called by the early Dutch settlers in New York. The street in New York called the Bowery passed through the farm of Gov. Peter Stuyvesant; in later times it became noted for cheap shops and places of amusement, and for the loud and flashy character of its frequenters; hence the various deprecatory terms used in reference to it. The "Bowery boy," the queerest product of America in his day, was "full of an affection." This reference of Julian Ralph in an article in the Century Magazine, in 1891, serves to strengthen this idea of cheapness.

Wrong Size

A new minister, short and stout, was appointed to a church in Perthshire. The beadle, a tall, raw-boned individual, who had worked at the church for 21 years, showed disapproval of the newcomer from the first.

Knowing that the old beadle was a shrewd judge, one of the elders tackled him on the point.

"What's wrong with him, Mac?" he was asked.

"The man's no good," replied the beadle, shaking his head lugubriously. "His trousers won't fit me."—London Answers.

Avoid It!

The death angel or destroying angel looks innocent enough, but it is the one mushroom that must be avoided. Of the sixty odd mushrooms that are more or less poisonous this one excels. Others produce sickness in a half hour or less if eaten, but the death angel causes no ill effects for 10 to 14 hours. The poison dissolves the red blood corpuscles and soon weakens the victim. Blood transfusions help, but it is far better to avoid this representative of the amanita family with its bulbous vase and veil about its stem.
