THEATRE NOTES

The latest Lloyd comedy, "Feet First" has a human touch. "Audiences like to be surprised when the surprise takes them completely unawares. Audiences like to come into a theatre with one set of thoughts, and depart with another. Audiences like to be thrilled, and best of all, they like to feel themselves part of what they see."

Such are Harold Lloyd's observations of the human psychology which he has applied to comedy making with amazing success. "There are no set rules on the psychology of audiences but their habits are pretty much the same," says the smiling comedian, whose latest roar riot, "Feet First," will be run at the Oasis theatre, Thursday, Friday and Saturday of this week. Lloyd believes that audiences like things that pull on their sympathies. A gentle tug at the human heart-strings will ally any audience with the hero and heroine in all their difficulties, he says. The human touch is what he strives for in his pictures because, he believes, the human touch is what people like, the thing that reflects their own experiences. "Feet First," according to early critical reports, is amply provided with the "human touch" that has made Lloyd famous. It deals with an ambitious and blundering shoe clerk, whose aspirations carry him to the height of comic thrills.

Opening Sunday and Monday at the Oasis theatre is Charles "Buddy" Rogers in "Along Came Youth." A picture of unusual merit and Rogers is a star of wide popularity.

HORSE NUMBERS SHRINK DURING PAST TEN YEARS

Should production of colts be continued at the present rate, the number of horses and mules will probably be reduced to around 10 million by 1940, according to a report just issued by the Oregon State college extension service. The horse and mule population in 1920 was 25 million.

The horse and mule population of Oregon on January 1, 1931 was 174,000 head, compared to 286,000 head 10 years ago. This is a reduction of 40 per cent.

The market outlook for horses and mules depends largely upon the extent power operated equipment may continue to replace work animals, the report continues. Prices remain low in the western states, and only a slight tendency for prices to advance has been noted in the eastern states. Some observers think the demand, especially for mules, may be good in five or six years.

OREGON GETS FOREST HIGHWAY FUNDS

Oregon will receive $1,344,741 out of the allocation of $9,500,000 in forest highway funds to be expended in 33 states and territories in the fiscal year 1932, according to announcement issued today by the Regional Forester, Portland, Oregon.

The total for the United States in the same as that available for the current fiscal year, which in point of highway construction on the national forests is to set a new record. The 1931 program is being rushed to aid in relief of unemployment, as well as to open up national forest areas to use and to facilitate protection of forest and watershed against fire, according to the Regional Forester.

Oregon ranks second of all the states in total amount received, being exceeded only by California. The funds are used in the states having national forest lands within their boundaries and apportioned on a basis of acreage and value of these forests. Construction and maintenance of forest highways is handled by the Bureau of Public Roads.

The highway-building program for the national forests was more than doubled for the current year.

When I say 'Howdy neighbor!' . . . . I mean it! My neighbor and I both take our butterfat, eggs and poultry to the nearest Swift & Company produce plant and get spot cash for them. It makes no difference how much we raise, Swift & Company takes it at the going market price as fast as we can deliver. Swift & Company employees give me the same treatment as they do my neighbor. There are 200,000 of us who deliver our produce to the Swift & Company plants. It makes a smooth-running, cooperative system which works for the best interests of producer, manufacturer and consumer. Because: 1. The producer (that's me) doesn't have to worry about local glut or shortages. He always has a market based on national demand. He always gets his money. 2. The manufacturer (that's Swift & Company) has a tremendous source of supply—getting the best that's produced. Swift also has a great distributive system that supplies retailers all over the country. 3. The consumer (that's you) gets the finest quality foods, in a fresh and sanitary condition, much of it grown and prepared right here in your own home town by your own home folk. "A Producer"

$5,000,000 having been added by Congress to the amount appropriated annually in recent years. Reports from many communities indicate that road building in the national forests is proving helpful in relieving the local unemployment situation. The forest highways are first-class roads, generally linking up with state highway systems. The Forest Service is also expending $3,000,000 on forest development roads and trails within the national forests in fiscal year 1931, as part of an annual program of development and forest protection.
