WITH FARMERS AROUND THE STATE

DALLAS—Last year Ernest Hoisington of Lewisville in cooperation with J. R. Beck, county agent, applied ground limerock to a portion of his alfalfa field, and left an equal area unlimed. At the first cutting of alfalfa this spring, Mr. Hoisington cut just 4 1/2 times as much alfalfa from the limed as from the unlimed plot, and the second cutting, which is now nearly ready for harvest, shows an even greater difference.

HILLSBORO—By using home grown feeds supplemented with some purchased materials, Elmer Guerber of Hillsboro has decreased the cost of calf meal more than 30 per cent, he recently reported to W. F. Cyrus, county agent. Mr. Grueber is using the calf meal ration developed by the dairy department at O.S.C. He says that in addition to the saving, the heifers fed his meal in 1930 were the finest bunch he has ever raised.

Opposition to the 18th Amendment takes form in the shape of misleading propaganda, of which the following article is one of ten statements to appear in this column in answer to this propaganda.

We are indebted to "American Business Men's Prohibition Foundation" for these articles.

First, "The Eighteenth Amendment the will of the American people?"

"Did prohibition steal upon us like a thief in the night? Was it the outgrowth of hasty and impulsive action? Was it the will of the few inflicted without reason against the judgment of the many? Indeed prohibition was not hastily adopted. Ten years before the Civil war—back in 1851—Maine adopted the first law calling for state prohibition. Between that date and the time when national prohibition became a fact, more than half of the states followed the lead of Maine. Before the United States entered the World War in 1917, 25 of the 48 states had adopted state prohibition. By action of the states themselves, besides a large portion of the other states were under local option. Yet there are those who say the 18th amendment would not have been adopted were it not for the absence of two million men who were over seas in the world war. The statement is absurd in face of facts. Let facts answer that charge for all time.

"The Senators and Representatives from every state in the Union who decided the question of national prohibition were chosen prior to April 6, 1917, the date when America entered the war, and prohibition at that time had become such a dominant issue that there was scarcely a Senator or Representative who was not elected as a result of his stand for or against the legalized sale of beverage alcohol."

"So America had gone on record before even the first troops were mobilized, and at no time during the war was more than ten per cent of the voting strength deprived of ballot privileges, and at least half of this ten per cent were from dry territory. Did the nation want prohibition? That it did cannot be questioned. The 18th Amendment was ratified by the largest number of states, and by the largest percentage of states that ever ratified any amendment to the constitution. Only two states failed to ratify. During 130 years, more than 2000 proposals of various sorts had been considered for amending the Constitution of the U. S. Only 17 had been adopted. The prohibition amendment is 18th. Do you suppose the American Congress would sanction such a move without most carefully weighing every factor? And do you suppose it would have been so overwhelmingly ratified by the states if there was any question about what the voters wanted? America wanted prohibition. America has prohibition. America has advanced by reason of the 18th Amendment and will continue to do so."
