Has Prohibition Increased Drinking?

"Anyone who will make an open-minded comparison of drinking before and after prohibition cannot fail to reach a single honest conclusion. Conditions are better today—immeasurably better—and the evidence of this betterment is manifold. True, there is illegal drinking, and it is a problem. But even the most confirmed wet would hesitate to proclaim that the families of his acquaintance will drink, each, an average of 100 gallons of distilled liquors, wines, and beer this year. That, however, was the approximate average yearly consumption from 1910 to 1914—22.43 gallons for every man, woman and child in the United States, according to United States Department of Commerce statistics.

Contrast that with the situation today. Exact figures cannot, of course, be obtained. But there have been several carefully computed estimates. Some authorities state that there is 10 per cent. as much drinking today as before prohibition. Some estimate as high as 20 per cent. and even more. But let us consider an extremely generous estimate."

"For the fiscal year ending June 30, 1930, according to the U. S. Bureau of Prohibition, the average per capita consumption of distilled liquors, wines and beer (including home-made products was slightly more than 7 gallons. That is about 30 per cent. of pre-prohibition consumption. If people today are drinking 30 per cent. of what they formerly did, prohibition has bettered conditions by 70 per cent. That is indeed a worth-while accomplishment. "And," says Colonel Amos W. Woodstock, director of the U. S. bureau of prohibition, "consumption of alcoholic liquor grows less from year to year."

People too easily forget the conditions of ten, fifteen, and twenty years ago. Back in 1908, for example there was one retail liquor dealer for every 333 men, women, and children in the U. S.—which means one for every 74 families. The yearly expenditure for liquor in this country before prohibition was three times as great as the cost of operating our public schools—and twice the cost of running our federal government. Probably no law enjoys 100 per cent observance, and the prohibition laws are no exception. But history is certain to repeat itself. Growing observance will increase the law's effectiveness. That was the experience of individual states which excluded liquor prior to national prohibition. First there was a brief period of rigid observance, then a recession, and finally, after a period of years, a powerful, steady, unwavering swing toward effective observance. National prohibition is well along on the second stage now. The third stage should be just around the corner." (Article 6 next week)

THE GREATEST VALUE EVER BUILT INTO A FORD CAR

$490 (F. O. B. Detroit, plus freight and delivery. Bumpers and spare tire extra at low cost.)

WHEN you buy a Ford car today, you buy what is unquestionably the greatest value in the history of the Ford Motor Company. Never before has so much beauty, comfort, safety and performance been offered at such a low price.

The low price of the Ford is something to think about because it means an immediate saving of many dollars — always an important consideration. But far more significant than price alone is what you get for that price. When high quality is combined with low price, you may justly take pride in having found a most satisfactory purchase.

See the Ford — ride in it — learn something about the value that is built into every part. The more you know about it, the more certain you will be that it is the car for you. It is literally true that when you "get the facts you will get a Ford."
