RULES GOVERNING FOREST FIRES DURING HUNTING SEASON.

So many inquiries have been received relative to access to forest areas at the beginning of the hunting season on September 20 that the cooperative forest protection agencies of Oregon desire to make the following statement of policy governing the use of forest land.

At the present time less than 5 per cent of Oregon's 25,000,000 acres of forest land is closed to all entry and all forms of use. Closures of this character have been made on account of the extreme hazard resulting from the blowdown in April, and also in certain snag areas and other special hazards. The south half of the Mt. Hood national forest, areas in Coos County, and elsewhere in the state, are closed to all forms of use pending the occurrence of heavy fall rains. These closures may continue into or throughout the hunting season and prevent hunting as well as other use.

An additional 2 per cent of the total forest area is subject to entry only through permit. These permits may be secured by anyone desiring to enter restricted areas, and the permit may specify any or all of the following requirements:

(a) To build no fires except at designated places.

(b) To have as part of his or her equipment tools suitable for extinguishing fire.

(c) To refrain from smoking except in safe places.

Restrictions of this character applying to specific areas cannot be removed until sufficient rain has fallen to materially reduce the fire danger.

Two general restrictions apply only to national forests. These precautionary measures require (a) that a permit be secured for all camp fires excepting at designated camp grounds, and (b) that the public refrain from smoking while traveling. These measures do not affect entry on forest areas, but provide rules of conduct designed to prevent fires, and are effective until heavy fall rains end the danger caused by the use of fire in the forests.

Of the remaining 93 per cent of the total forest area, there are no restrictions limiting entry for hunting or other lawful use of the forest by any one. No additional restrictions will be applied anywhere in the state either before or after September 20 unless the fire hazard in any particular locality may make them essential to prevent loss of the state's forest resources. The system, however, may be applied over more extensive areas, but restrictions of this character do not prohibit hunting or other use. They simply establish certain safety measures for the use of fire on forest land. No general closure affecting state-wide areas will be made.

Information about closed and permit areas will be disseminated through the press. Maps showing the areas affected will be maintained at the offices of the state forester, state game commissioner, and regional office of the forest service in Portland, and at the offices of the supervisors and state protective agencies.

The officials, state, federal, and private, who have the responsibility of protecting from fire Oregon's forest areas are endeavoring to bring about conditions under which the greatest protection may be given our forest resources with the least inconvenience to all forest users. Cooperation by the forest-using public during the present year has been excellent. If with largely increased use which will occur with the opening of the hunting season the same degree of care with fire is exercised, it probably will be unnecessary to make any further restrictions in the use of forest areas.

Governor Julius L. Meier, Chairman, State Board of Forestry, C. J. Buck, Regional Forester, U. S. Forest Service.

Aubrey R. Watzek, President, Oregon Forest Fire Association.

Marshall N. Dana, Chairman, State Game Commission.

NEW PRIZES OFFERED 4-H BOYS AND GIRLS AT STATE FAIR

SALEM, Or., Sept. 9—Boys and Girls club members in Oregon have several new prizes to compete for at the 70th Oregon State Fair. Mount Angel stock farm has put up a Holstein special, Arbordale Queen of Sheba, who was sired by Lad of Jerealia, and whose dam was Arbordale Dorothy Perkins. This thoroughbred calf will be up as a prize for 4-H members exhibiting in the Holstein classes.

For the Guernsey classification, H. B. Howell of Rogueland farm, Grants Pass, will give a purebred Guernsey calf.

WITH FARMERS AROUND THE STATE

DALLAS—An application of 100 pounds of landplaster per acre to alfalfa on the C. Muller farm near Independence brought a large increase in the first cutting, and by the time the crop was ready for the second cutting had more than doubled the yield, says J. R. Beck, county agent. In addition to the heavier yield, the crop was heavier and leafier.

LA GRANDE—Irrigation of alfalfa by means of flooding from ditches was tried out on the N. K. West farm this year in cooperation with County Agent H. G. Avery. Results measured by hay yields were encouraging, and the field will be laid out in a permanent ditch system this fall.

ENTERPRISE—Twenty-five cars of livestock were shipped through the Wallowa County Livestock Marketing association during the past month, reports County Agent N. C. Donaldson. This included 11 cars containing 2034 hogs, 3 cars with 90 head of cattle, 3 cars containing 2514 head of sheep and two cars of blackface lambs.

CANYON CITY—More than 120 acres of alfalfa land on the Oliver Brothers' ranch between John Day and Prairie City, treated with sulfur, responded so well that Herman Oliver told County Agent R. G. Johnson, who cooperated in the trial, that if no further benefit came from the sulfur put on this spring he would feel entirely repaid for the labor and material costs. Mr. Oliver is planning on applying sulfur to his entire meadow area.

EASY MARRIAGE "OUTS" ARE HIT IN SCREEN PLOT

Even in this day of easy divorce, the old adage "marry in haste, repent in leisure" still holds its own. Mary Roberts Rinehart's actional love story, on which "I Take This Woman," the Oasis theatre attraction for Sunday and Monday next week, brings the old adage up to date and proves that divorce is not always an easy out for headless marriage ties.

Gary Cooper and Carole Lombard, the blonde beauty whose rapid rise to screen fame is one of Hollywood's current wonders, carry the leading roles in "I Take This Woman." The story originally appeared in novel form under the title "Lost Ecstasy" and attained outstanding success.

Miss Lombard is seen as the girl, spoiled and selfish darling of wealth, whose society and night-club escapades enmesh her in a dangerous scandal. Her father ships her off to his Wyoming ranch to vacation while the furor is subsiding. There she meets a man, strange to her, Gary Cooper, and, intrigued by his handsome, careless swagger, she flirts with him, teases his interest, and marries him. Disinherited by her father, she struggles for life and love on a barren Wyoming ranch, until finally disgusted, she accepts her father's offer of forgiveness and returns to her former light-hearted world.
