Autumn.

There is one thing in which America has it over Europe. That is our Autumn season, or as we usually call it the Fall of the year.

It must be admitted that we don't have very much of a Spring season. In most parts of this country. We go from Winter smack into Summer. We don't understand what the English poets are talking about when they sing of Spring. But over there they go from Summer right into Winter, almost. There is none of that long-drawn-out season after harvest, when the leaves are turning and falling and, in the North, at least, there is a touch of frost in the early morning and the sweet smell of fallen leaves and Nature takes on a cast of gorgeous color before shifting to the somber gray of Winter.

Fall is the season of play for the farmer. When the crops have been harvested and the Fall plowing done, there is a period before Winter sets in when hunting is at its best, when it is a pleasure to be out of doors with nothing of immediate importance to attend to. It is the season of relaxation after the heat and strain of the Summer, when folk can take time to sum up the result of the year's work and begin their plans for the next.

Thanksgiving Day, in most parts of this country, marks the end of Fall and the real beginning of Winter. Then we begin to look forward to Christmas and thence to next Spring. We hear travelers tell of countries where the seasons never change from one year to the other. It seems to us that half of the pleasure of life comes from the hanging seasons, and from looking forward to the next change.

FEELSE STORY IS BACKGROUND FOR FLAMING ACTION.

An intensely interesting human story is the background for the exciting melodrama, "Silence," now showing at the Oasis theatre here, Sunday and Monday, with Clive Brook, the charming Marjorie Rambeau and the flaming haired Peggy Shannon in the leading roles.

"Silence" gives Brook an opportunity to portray a great human character, and the suave and polished star takes every advantage of the opportunity. Supported by two capable and beautiful actresses, Brook sounds the depths of a man's soul in a series of adventures, escapades, trials and disillusionments that bring him finally to the superb sacrifice to save his own daughter's reputation.

Peggy Shannon displays a new acting flare in "Silence" which bears out the promise of versatility contained in her role in "The Secret Call." She is dramatic, colorful, emotional, and, withal, interestingly gay and alive. Playing two roles in this one picture, that of the wife and, later, the daughter of Brook, she manages by sheer talent to keep the two characters separate and distinct and interesting.

Theatre-goers will be particularly intrigued by the presence of glamorous Marjorie Rambeau in this excellent cast, and those who saw "Fast and Loose," recently, and admired its dark, handsome hero, will welcome the return in the juvenile role of "Silence." Other parts are capably filled by Willard Robertson, John Wray and Frank Sheridan.

The action of the picture takes place over a period of twenty or more years, and the early sequences give vivid and interesting life to the "good old days" before the war. The latter scenes, taking place in a modern Middle West city, concentrate all the force of the drama in terse and thrilling climactic incidents.

"Silence" is drama taken from life real, thrilling, believably portrayed.

performed by Dr. William Bishop of St. Thomas' church. The bride wore a lovely gown of cream satin molded to the figure and with a court train. Her veil was of rose point lace over train. Mrs. John Keffer's of New York, a classmate of the bride, was matron of honor and wore a chiffon with a sash of old blue and a large blue hat. Little Allie May Smoot, granddaughter of Senator Smoot, was flower girl and wore a dainty frock of pink chiffon. Mrs. Swayze, mother of the bride, wore a gown of black and flesh chiffon, trimmed with crystals and a large black hat.

Miss Hazel Channing of Bingen, Wn., and Mrs. H. O. Barnes, who have been visiting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Channing for the past week, were invited guests at a reception held at the residence of Rev. and Mrs. W. Miller, pastor of the Community Presbyterian church of Umatilla and Boardman, Wednesday, September 23, given by the Home Economics club and the Ladies Aid.

The residence was an ideal place for the reception with the beautiful home, garden, lawn and flowers. Rev. Miller and his wife were indeed surprised and delighted to be so remembered on Mr. Miller's 64th birthday, and they received their guests in their graceful way and made them welcome. The ladies had collected together a complete course of the good things to eat which was served in a dining room banked with autumn flowers. After dinner, music, and greetings the guests departed with the blessings of Rev. and Mrs. Miller, thinking this world is indeed a good place in which to live.
