And then we have, last but not least, the turkey growers. Have you ever seen anything to equal our local record?

Just a few years ago, one of our local citizens, Thomas W. Botkin began to raise them "commercially." Last year there were shipped from here five carloads of dressed turkeys. It was the opinion of the official inspector that they ranked with the best turkeys he had ever inspected, and as a matter of fact, turkeys grown in the northwest were the best grown in the whole country. It is to be hoped that the turkeys will be well represented at the fair. The turkey growers association owe it to the community to show what they can do in the way of supplying the principal dish for thanksgiving and Christmas festivities.

"The Virginian" and as the mustang-hunter in "Gun Smoke," here plays the part of Lieu Colton, the leader of a detachment of cavalry which is sent to the outlaw country to preserve order.

At the outset they run into difficulty with a gang of rustlers who are led by one of the most desperate women of that day — "Calamity." Gun-toting, stogie-smoking and more ruthless than any of the killers in her gang, this female terror runs things her way. She is the proprietress of the leading dance and gambling hall.

For a time it appears that the cavalrymen will have the upper hand
