Stay on the Farm.

Stay at home and help Dad do the milking, is the warning given to young people who have a desire to go to the city to seek employment.

Disappointment is a sad beginning to a young person's career. It will be far better to remain another year in school or help at home, than to be obliged to return home disheartened and discouraged.

Is the Hermiston Commercial club going to get behind the movement for the development of navigation and power on the Columbia river and back the Columbia Valley association in its efforts to obtain a market for generated power?

No development of the Columbia will be made until the interested communities and states furnish adequate markets for power generated by either the minor or major projects. Representatives in Congress will require a definite statement as to what project they favor before they will support any portion of the army engineers' report.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCHES

"Mortals and Immortals" was the subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, Nov. 15. The Golden Text was, "We all, with open face beholding as in a glass the glory of the Lord, are changed into the same image from glory to glory, even as by the Spirit of the Lord" (II Cor. 3:18).

Among the citations which comprised the Lesson-Sermon was the following from the Bible: "Jesus answered and said unto him, Verily, verily, I say unto thee, Except a man be born again, he cannot see the kingdom of God" (John 3:3). The Lesson-Sermon also included the following passages from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures", by Mary Baker Eddy: "Man's genuine selfhood is recognizable only in what is good and true. . . Mortals are not like immortals, created in God's own image, but infinite Spirit being all, mortal consciousness will at last yield to the scientific fact and disappear, and the real sense of being, perfect and forever intact, will appear" (pp.204, 205).

10:55 A. M., Sermon, "The Faith Life." 11:20 A. M., Teaching service. 6:30 P. M., Christian Endeavor societies. 7:30 P. M., Church service. Sermon subject, "Catching Fish in Deep Water."

METHODIST CHURCH

Oscar Payne, Pastor. There will be an especially interesting session of the Sunday School at 10:00 o'clock, followed by the regular morning worship hour. The morning subject will be, "Fulfilling the Law of Christ."

In the depths of the most bitter experience through which the human being may go, will be found the church of Jesus Christ, with its unselfish devotion to Him, and with its sincere desire to be of service to Him. Throughout the history of the human family, the church has been stopped in the mission of the Good Samaritan. Seeing her brother in a fallen state, unable to even revive hope, she has gone with a message of love and hope and unfeigned faith in the militant Christ. Only to see the revival of vision, hopes and courage return and join the triumphant march of the Nazarene. As long as there is need in the human heart there will be need for the church.

Why not line up with the only organization in existence that is deeply concerned with the welfare of man? No other organization on the earth, save the church of Jesus Christ has for its main motive, that of making the mind of the Master the main motive and mission of mankind. If you are in harmony with that program, make your way to one of the organizations of this city next Sunday. If you are not in harmony with it, you should make your way to the organization that will help you to make the mind of the master your main motive and mission.

Epworth League and Junior League in the evening, and at the regular church service the ladies class will conduct the evening worship hour. This service will be especially interesting and an inspiration to all. You are urged to attend this program.

MODERN GIRL OF "THE RECKLESS HOUR" DONE BY 1932 MODEL GIRL.

Dorothy Mackall, who is the modern heroine of the First National production, "The Reckless Hour," coming at the Oasis theatre, Friday and Saturday, describes this character as the typical modern alert girl of today who lives in a world of vivid contrasts and contradictions.

Her home life is modest and dull, in the midst of an ordinary family, but during the day she works as a model in a luxurious establishment, the same sharp contrast that is faced daily by thousands of girls who earn their living. She is thrown in constant association with luxuries which she cannot afford and with people who are her social superiors.

"The most intelligently resourceful person in the world today is the girl who is earning her own living," Miss Mackall declares. "Her awareness, her immediate response to fine things in people, in art, literature and music has done more to make these things fine than any other factor."

"She is the most intelligent critic of motion pictures and her evaluations are extremely important to producers and actors. We are making pictures with the knowledge that her approval is of inestimable importance and I think she will particularly like "The Reckless Hour" and Margaret Nichols, a girl who, like herself—is thoroughly human."

Miss Mackall is supported in "The Reckless Hour" by Conrad Nagel, Joan Blondell, H. B. Warner, Walter Byron, Helen Ware, Joe Donahue, William House, Dorothy Peterson, Ivan Simpson, Claude King and Mae Madison. John Francis Dillon directed.

BOOK CONTAINING INSTRUCTION ON EXPLOSIVES AVAILABLE.

Assistant County Agent Best has received from the Institute of Makers of Explosives, New York City, a copy of a book entitled "Explosives in Agriculture," which has just been published and which is said to be the most comprehensive and valuable treatise on farm explosives and their uses which has ever been printed.

The book represents the joint efforts of experts of the leading makers of explosives to consolidate in a single volume the results of more than twenty years' study of agricultural explosives and their application to the physical improvement of farms.

Separate sections of "Explosives in Agriculture" are devoted to stumping, ditching, rock and boulder blasting, and miscellaneous uses of dynamite.

Banking Relations Need Never Be IMPERSONAL

There is no reason why your banking contacts should be any less personal . . . any less human . . . than your other business relations. So interwoven are the interests of a bank and its depositors that no financial institution can grow and prosper unless its clients do likewise. The intelligent banker, appreciating this fact, gives the same thoughtful consideration to the problems of his friends, the depositors, as he would his own personal affairs. . . . He is glad to make suggestions which based on his specialized knowledge and experience in financial matters, will be of material help in building the business of those with whom he has such a commonality of interest.

of Hermiston Capital, Surplus and Undivided Profits Over $50,000 F. B. Swayze, Pres. - R. Alexander, Vice-Pres. - A. H. Norton, Cashier

Among the occasional uses of explosives described are such as soil blasting, subsoiling, tree planting, orchard rejuvenation, vertical drainage, burying stone piles, excavating cellars and trench silos, blasting wells, ice blasting, making and cleaning out water holes, digging post holes, and numerous purposes where by time and labor costs may be saved. Still another section deals with the properties of explosives and describes the various types, along with descriptions of electric blasting machines, the tools required by the blaster, and other accessories. In this section are explained wiring systems, the priming of charges, transportation and storage of explosives, and safety practices. Mr. Best has the book on file at his office for the use of farmers and will be glad to consult with them in matters relating to farm betterments which can be brought about by employing explosives.
