Fact From W. C. T. U.

The claim of the wets that two million men would be put to work should we repeal national prohibition is routed by the fact that the entire liquor traffic in 1914 had only 403,901 employees; and that was the year of the greatest liquor traffic the country ever saw.

The exact figures as shown by wet congressmen in the debate on constitutional prohibition, December 1931:

Brewery workers	62,363
Distillery workers	7,217
Wine making	2,254
Malting	1,928
Bartenders	409,465
Employees in allied trades, such as bottlers, cappers, etc.	15,620
Total	498,901

What Corn Whiskey Will Do.

Mill City League.

An exchange says corn whiskey will resume stains from summer clothes. No doubt correct. It will also remove the summer clothes as well as the winter, spring and autumn clothes, not only from the man who drinks it, but from the wife and children as well. It will remove linings from stomachs, hair from hears teeth and tonsils, reputation and self respect. It will remove what little sense the drinker has, and make a wild cat out of what would otherwise be an inoffensive plug citizen. It will remove the food from the table, the furniture from house and the happy, eager look from the faces of little children.

As a remover of things corn whiskey has no equal.

Lukas Switches Professions.

Paul Lukas, who was an artist in "Women Love Once" is now a sculptor. At least he becomes a master of the art of carving beautiful figures from stone for the purposes of the plot of "The Beloved Bachelor," playing at the Oasis theatre, Sunday and Monday, January 3 and 4. In this picture, in which Lukas plays the title role, he is the much-sought-after bachelor who is beloved of three women. He is supported by Dorothy Jordan, Charlie Ruggles Leni Stengel, Vivienne Osborne and Guy Oliver.

"CIMARRON", FILM EPIC COMING TO HERMISTON.

U. O. Again Chosen Summer Art Center

University of Oregon, Eugene. — The University of Oregon in the west and Harvard University in the east have again been chosen as summer session teacher training centers in art by the Carnegie Corporation and the American Institute of Architects, it is announced here by Dr. Arnold Bennett Hall, president of the University. The grant, which is used both for scholarships and for providing instruction and material, has also been increased for the University of Oregon from $5,000 for the season to $7,500.

Scholarships will be given by the Carnegie Corporation to a large number of college instructors in art, and to others in this field, and these will tend to build up the graduate school materially and still further improve the quality of students by bringing in this outstanding group, Dr. Hall points out. The additional amount of the grant will make possible changes in policy and procedure that will assure the university the best summer session in this work that it has ever had, it is believed.

New System Gives U. O. Journalists Real Experience

University of Oregon, Eugene. — A newspaper without subscribers would seem to be of little use in the world, yet such newspapers are of vital interest to students at the University of Oregon school of journalism. Four complete daily papers are planned, written and made-up by students of the school, and carried through all normal procedure to the point of publication. There, work on the paper stops, and all cease work to discuss the paper and hear criticisms from the instructor.

This re-organization of the journalism work, which has been put into effect recently by Dean Eric W. Allen, is expected to give the students much more practical experience than ever before, since work is now done under the shadow of an impending deadline. Classes are now held only for the purpose of discussion and criticism of the actual laboratory work on the four papers, named for the days on which they are written, the Monday Mail, Tuesday Tribune, Wednesday World and Thursday Times.

Wire and syndicate services are supplied to the students through the courtesy of the Eugene Register-Guard. Further details of the plan will be put into effect in the future, Dean Allen stated, as at the present time it was possible only to utilize such portions of it as did not need submission to the state board of higher education.

IN OREGON HOMES

PORTLAND—Of the 25 women enrolled in the weight control project of the Multnomah county home extension unit, 22 of them kept check on their weight for a period of five months. During that time, of 17 who were overweight at the outset, 10 had lost weight and three of the five underweights had gained several pounds. Frances Clinton, home demonstration agent, with the cooperation of Lucy A. Case, extension specialist in nutrition, supervised this project.

ST. HELENS—Clothing renovation and pattern alteration constitute a continuous clothing program in the home economics extension unit of Columbia county. Twenty-seven made-over dresses and four children's remodeled garments were reported on at four meetings held recently. These clothing projects are directed by Mrs. Sarah V. Case, home demonstration agent.

CORVALLIS — A mimeographed leaflet picturing a homemade cleaning kit, made from a fruit basket or a few boards has been recently released from the home economics extension office. The contents of such a homemade cleaning kit are suggested and explanations given for making a number of cleaners. For example, an excellent cleaner for woodwork is made by mixing one quart of kerosene and one pint of hot vinegar, says Mrs. Zelta Rodenwold, extension economist in home management, who prepared the leaflet.
