allowed to do them.

"But don't get me wrong," he cautioned. "I'm not trying to present them as 'Damon and Pythias,' nor to imply that they carry their cooperation to extremes.

"Caught Plastered," with the stars backed by a strong cast including Dorothy Lee, Lucy Beaumont, Jason Robards, DeWitt Jennings, Charles Middleton, Nora Cecil, and Josephine Whittell, is the strongest story yet attempted.

In that lies the real depth of their mutual appreciation. In such a circumstance, Woolsey will, think for a moment, null the matter over and say 'yes' or 'no,' just as he honestly believes. Reverse the situation and Wheeler does the same. One might say, I believe, that their tremendous success is due to frankness and honest desire on the part of each to give their best and to help each other do likewise."

Prime and Mrs. Mable Ralph entertained for a group of high school students in honor of Frank Prime, Jr., and Miss Betty Ralph. Dancing was the form of entertainment for the evening at the close of which delightful refreshments were served.

TEN YEARS EXPERIENCE.

"With 'cooperation' and 'teamwork,' the slogans of the day, it is interesting to note the relationship of Bert Wheeler and Robert Woolsey, comedy stars," declares William Seiter, who directed their latest success, "Caught Plastered," now at the Oasis theatre, Sunday and Monday.

They have appeared together in seven successive triumphs, and have become the foremost comedy pair on the talking picture screen," Seiter said, "solely because of their generosity towards one another and their consideration for each other's success.

"At least a dozen times during the filming of this production Woolsey came to me with gags which he believed would be the funniest in the world... if Wheeler were
