POTATO TREATMENT MUCH SIMPLIFIED BY NEW METHOD.

Protection of Oregon's potato crop against scab and rhizoctonia will be easier and cheaper this season as the result of successful tests of a simplified method of seed treatment made by the Oregon Experiment station and just described in a new circular of information.

Heretofore the standard method of seed treatment has been either soaking for two hours in a corrosive sublimate solution or treating with hot formaldehyde solution. The former was slow and tedious and the latter was difficult to regulate.

The new method, originated first at the Minnesota experiment station uses the corrosive sublimate (mercuric chloride) solution, but with the addition of a small amount of hydrochloric acid, which speeds up the action so much that only five minutes soaking is required rather than two hours.

To treat the potatoes a solution is made up of 4 ounces of mercuric chloride, one quart of commercial hydrochloric acid and 25 gallons of water. This is enough to treat 40 or 50 bushels before strengthening is required, after which as many more may be treated before discarding the solution.

Either a wooden barrel, a tub or concrete tank is used as metal is atacked by the solution: A wooden rate, or wire basket coated with asphaltum paint, is used for dipping. Five minutes soaking is enough for clean, smooth tubers, though scurf potatoes require a little longer soaking for as much as 40 minutes will not hurt them, though it is not necessary.

The directions for treating caution the grower against storing the potatoes after treating, saying that damage will result unless they are either planted immediately or spread out to dry.

Free copies of the circulars describing the method in detail may be had from any county agent or direct from the college.

CLUB MEMBERS TO OBSERVE WASHINGTON BICENTENNIAL.

Much may be added to the future beauty of Oregon roadways, streets, parks, schools and other public buildings as the result of activity of 4-H club forestry members of the state who will plant trees furnished at the state forest nursery at Corvallis in observation of the Washington Bicentennial February 2.

Other ways in which 4-H club members of the state can pay suitable tribute to the memory of George Washington have also been suggested by R. J. Maske of the state education department, and Charles Weber, city club agent of Portland, who constitute a committee appointed to draw up such suggestions and recommendations for the clubbers. These include pageants and playlets depicting the value of Washington's life to boys and girls of today, and the study of the life and customs of the people of that day. Home economics clubs will make a special study of the costumes and furniture of Colonial times.

"Win as Washington Would" is the motto which will be featured by the club members in the programs to be put before clubs, granges, parent-teacher bodies and schools in practically every community of Oregon in observation of the bicentennial.

are equipped with electric cooking devices

THE new MONARCH Electric complies with all the essentials of up-to-date home equipment. It is both dependable in performance and attractive in appearance—thereby recommending itself to the discriminating homemaker. The MONARCH Grand, a most remarkable electric range design, furnishes adequate cooking surface and a large oven equipped with automatic time and temperature controls—it requires only a reasonable amount of floor space. The heavy insulation and general construction of the oven assures maximum heat from the fuel consumed, as well as a uniform temperature throughout the entire baking compartment. This in turn is accurately maintained by the automatic temperature control for any length of time. This model is furnished in two attractive, colored enamel finishes: Ivory-Tan and Nile-Green, as well as all White.

Oregon Hardware & Implement Co.

Ranges are modern in design and finish—over one hundred models from which to choose—all available in full enamel White, Nile-Green or Ivory-Tan—a beautiful finish easily cleaned.

CORVALLIS — Kale has been found the most profitable, succulent feed for dairy cattle in the Willamette valley, according to trials conducted at the Oregon State college experiment station. CANYON CITY—"A few gophers a day will put the time of reseeding away." This slogan, says County Agent R. G. Johnson, might well be adopted by numerous eastern Oregon ranchers whose alfalfa stands are rapidly being thinned out by gophers. The situation is serious and unnecessary, says Mr. Johnson, who points out that poisoning the gophers is an easy and inexpensive operation.
