MISS DEL RIO AND CARRILLO NEW FILM DUO AT OASIS.

After an absence of two years owing to illness, Dolores Del Rio returns triumphantly to the screen in a glamorous role. The star makes her belated celluloid appearance at the Oasis theatre Sunday and Monday in RKO-Radio Pictures' "Girl of the Rio." Featured with her is Leo Carrillo, rapidly becoming an outstanding screen star.

Miss Del Rio's reappearance is a fortuitous one in that she selected a story which affords in plot structure, atmosphere and treatment a fit setting for her rare talents as an actress.

She plays the role of "The Dove," who is forced by circumstance to dance and sing in a riotous cafe just across the border from the United States.

As in real cafes of this type—namely in Tia Juana, Juarez and Mexicali—there are scores of interesting types, Mexicans, Chinese, men on a spree, commission girls, and the ever-present, soft-spoken gamblers.

The picture setting is a faithful production of such a border town with the addition of a superb rancho exterior and interior. One of the sets is a garden spreading over an acre and a half that was laid out in two days with thousands of potted tropical plants and trees producing an exotic effect rarely attained in films.

Dramatically, Miss Del Rio portrays what critics have declared to be the best starring role of her career, combining the poetic beauty of her work in "Ramona" and "Evangeline" with the vivacity and movement of "What Price Glory."

Supporting the star are Leo Carrillo, who plays the vain-glorious Don Jose Tostado, the self-proclaimed "bes" caballero in all Mexico";
