Aftermath of the Literary Digest Poll.

The unreliability of the Literary Digest poll in the light of two state primaries recently held is shown by Chester Rowell, in the San Francisco Chronicle. He says in commenting on the result of the primaries in California and Indiana.

"The Literary Digest poll shows the very places which have just voted dry, as overwhelmingly wet. It likewise shows a huge wet majority in Indiana, which has just renominated all its dry Republican Congressmen, plus one new dry Democrat. Evidently one vote or the other is wrong. And no wet and no dry will accept either as conclusive until there has been a direct vote on the question itself, which both will have to accept."

An Old-Time Saloonkeeper Looks Backward—and Jeers at "Liberty."

You certainly hit the nail on the head in your editorial, "Prohibition—A Great Campaign to Popularize Booze." Advertising has become a business of monumental proportions. You have accomplished much through your wet sheet toward leading a multitude of people to believe that prohibition is a failure. Your tricky articles have fooled many, but there is still a multitude you have not fooled, and that is the old-time saloonkeepers. I'm one of them. In the old days we had to pay a

WHOLESALE PRICE INDEX UP SLIGHTLY IN MONTH.

Although business conditions in general in the United States continued to decline in June, some encouragement was had from a moderate upturn in the general wholesale price since the middle of June, says a report just released by the college extension service. It was pointed out, however, that the downward course of prices was interrupted twice before during the recession which began in 1929.

"Whether the present upward movement is the beginning of a major incline, or will prove to be merely a minor upturn in the course of the recession cannot now be stated authoritatively," says the report.

On July 9, the index of the general level of wholesale prices reached 94.6 per cent of the 1910-1914 level, compared to 93 on June 18, the lowest point reached so far in this depression.

The government index of factory payrolls declined over 4 per cent from April to May, reaching a level only 46 per cent of the average for the same season from 1923 to 1925. The index of factory employment dropped from 64 to 62, and the industrial production index went from 64 to 61.

The Dow-Jones index of industrial stock prices in the United States declined 12 per cent from May to June, reaching 47 compared to 53 a month previous, 138 in June 1931, 239 in June 1930 and 215 in June 1929.

The index of the general level of prices received by producers for farm products declined 7 per cent from May 15 to June 15 to 52 per cent of prewar. This is a new record low point which is 25 per cent below June 1931, 125 per cent less than in June 1930, and 160 per cent under June 1929. The average exchange value of farm products on June 15 was only about 47 per cent of prewar, with livestock and livestock products having a higher average exchange value than crops. Since mid-June the trend of prices for some farm products has been more favorable to producers.

Cover Crop High in Nitrogen.

CORVALLIS—Curious to know how much plant food he was turning under when plowing down a cover crop of vetch and oats, Gilmore Hector, a farmer near here, had the elements in the heavy crop estimated and discovered that he was plowing under 65 pounds of nitrogen per acre alone, equivalent to the amount in 400 pounds of ammonium sulfate. In addition to the fertilizing value, Mr. Hector hopes to gain much from the added organic matter in the soil which is an important factor in retaining moisture through the dry summers. He plans to watch carefully the effect of the cover crop on the regular crop to be grown on the field this year.
