LOWER AUTO LICENSE FEE URGED BY SECRETARY HOSS

A cut in automobile license fee of at least one half was urged again by Secretary of State Hal E. Hoss after analyzing several hundred letters from distressed motorists and on studying reports from the Washington motor vehicle division, which show many apparent evasions of the Oregon license law.

"Real relief lies in a lower license fee, as I have repeatedly pointed out," said Hoss, "and I am certain the next legislature will cut license at least by one half. A year and a half ago I urged action on this matter, pointing out the difficulties we would experience in Oregon with low $3 flat fees both in California and Washington. Experience has developed just the conditions I anticipated and Oregon is losing thousands of dollars in license revenue to adjoining states. I know from the mail I receive that people generally are ready to demand a lower fee, and in my opinion it is absolutely justified in order to relieve the situation."

Among other predominating inquiries in the correspondence of the secretary of state during the last two weeks has been the one, "What has become of the governor's plan for issuing stickers or permits for licenses?" Repeated announcements in the press have told of the abandonment of the plan due to the fact that the suggested procedure was illegal, and that only a change in the law would permit any relief from this angle, but many automobile owners still question what method to follow to get relief from annual payment at this time. "Due to the fact that a session of the legislature has not been called to legalize some relief measure for motor vehicle owners, nothing can be accomplished apparently until the regular session in January," commented Hoss, when asked what applicants might do to get help at this time. "Those interested in lower fees or an easier plan of payment should talk to members of the legislature, who will be glad undoubtedly to have the opinion of car owners."

Two methods were proposed—one where the secretary of state would violate the law and illegally issue stickers and the other where the governor would legally call a special session and enact a law to take care of the emergency. The constitution says that no law shall be set aside except by the legislature, and the attorney-general told Hoss plainly that he could not legally issue quarterly fees. The secretary of state, in cooperation with members of the legislature and hundreds of automobile owners, has urged the governor to call a session to handle the problem as provided by law.

IRRIGATION TOUR OF WILLAMETTE VALLEY READY

How irrigation is serving through out western Oregon to cut down production costs of dairy and other products and frequently raise quality as well, will be viewed by those who make the third annual Willamette Valley Irrigation tour scheduled for August 18 and 19. Plans are now completed for this trip which is sponsored jointly by the irrigation committee of the Oregon Reclamation congress and the Oregon State college extension service.

The tour is open to farmers, business men, bankers or any others interested in this new phase of agricultural development in this section. The trip will start at Portland and end at Eugene, with everyone free to join at any point where most convenient and drop out whenever necessary, says Arthur King, extension soils specialist, who will be in charge.

Those leaving from Portland will start Thursday morning at 8:30 o'clock from Broadway and Stark streets, going at once to Hillsboro to join the Washington county party under County Agent Cyrus. After visiting two or three places between here and the west end of the county, the party will go on to McMinnville where the chamber of commerce is preparing another all-irrigated-products dinner.

County Agent White will head the party for some visits to successful irrigation projects in that county, including the new community gravity system that extends across that county, including the new community gravity system that extends across the line from Polk county into Yamhill near Sheridan.

Several stops will be made in Polk county under the leadership of county Agent Beck before the party goes on to Corvallis for the night. Friday morning will be devoted to inspection of the irrigation trials on the experiment station, some of which have been carried on for 25 years.

Just before noon the party will continue to Eugene where County Agent Fletcher will guide them on a tour of inspection of a number of irrigated truck farms. The number of stops has been greatly reduced from the number visited last year, in order that a better idea may be had of a few typical irrigation systems. It is estimated that irrigation has increased 50 per cent in Western Oregon this past year despite shortage of money for improvements.

FEWER LAMBS ARE RAISED; HAY, HONEY PRICES DOWN

Fewer lambs are being raised in the 13 western states than for the past two years, according to figures reviewed by the market news office of the Oregon State college extension service. The 1932 lamb crop in these states is about 13 per cent under 1931, and about 4 per cent below the 1930 crop. This year's crop is still larger than the 1929 lamb production by about 1,400,000 head.

The poor range and feed situation that existed last fall and winter is blamed for the reduction this year as it resulted in heavy losses of ewes and lambs during the winter and early spring. This summer, however, ranges are holding up better than for several years in the west, and as a result lambs have not been forced out of the producers' hands by feed shortage.
