INDIANS MAKE COLORFUL SPECTACLE AT ROUND-UP.

PENDLETON, Ore., August 31—(Special.)—Back in 1812 when sturdy pioneers visioned an Arcadia in Oregon and were pushing westward in the face of untold privations and hardships over what has since become famous as The Oregon Trail, the cry of Indians was one that terrorized these early travelers.

But today the cry of Indians that goes up annually at the Pendleton Round-Up, September 8, 9 and 10, is the signal for one of the most colorful spectacles of frontier life ever attempted. Two thousand braves, arrayed in the beaded garments that are carefully preserved from one generation to another, take part in the show, riding in the straight races, relay races and performing Indian war dances.

Some of these Indians who are approaching the century mark in years took part in many of the savage battles which raged between the whites and the Red Men for possession of the rich lands. With the exception of some of the younger generation the rugged first Americans still cling to traditions that date back to the dim past, their sources hidden in distant oblivion.

It was not so many years ago that two Indians, both of whom are still living, decided that one of their medicine women was a witch and possessed of dark powers which they believed were granted by the evil spirit. It was this woman's misfortune to allow one of her "patients" to die. Today, one of the Indians, relayed his suspicions of her witchcraft to Columbia George. They agreed that death was the only means by which this evil could be exorcised from their camp.

They accordingly arranged to kill the woman, whose American name was Annie McKay, by the simple expedient of liberally dosing a bottle of whisky with poison. But Annie was suspicious of this assertedly friendly gesture of the two men and refused the liberal drink they poured for her.

However, her qualms were overcome by their insistence and she drank the whisky. It was her last drink. But in the few moments of life left to her she told a neighbor the names of the two men she charged with poisoning her. But they insisted they were within their rights in poisoning the woman whom they declared was a menace to every Indian of the tribe. Each man was sentenced to life imprisonment but were released at the end of twelve years.

Among the Plutes the medicine man who loses three patients is usually ambushed and shot in the back. Pendleton Post No. 23 is preparing this year to entertain several thousand delegates to the National convention of the American Legion who will pass through here on their way to Portland. Pendleton is on the main lines from the East and stopovers for the Round-Up are granted by the railroads. Auto travel to the convention is expected to bring a great number of the veterans here for the classic of the frontier.

The string of 60 famous buckers belonging to the Round-Up association have been brought in from the range and are now quartered at the Round-Up grounds. Sixty head of steers were received last week from Mexico for the roping contests and bulldozing.

Baptist Church Notes.
 E. J. Cain, Pastor

The Baptist Church wishes to express its thanks to the teachers of the Hermiston grade and high school who last year helped us by their attendance, special numbers, and the help they gave on the teaching staff of our church school. We cordially invite you homecoming teachers and you new teachers to attend our services, enter into our fellowship, and share with us our blessed privilege of "working together with Christ." We believe the Baptist church can be of help to you and we will do all we can to cooperate with you and your program.

Next Sunday your Baptist pastor will speak in the morning on "Christ the Miracle Worker." In the evening his subject will be, "The Uplifted Christ."

There are special features to be noted in regard to the Sunday School and the Baptist Young People's Union. The Sunday school hour will be given over to a special program with the subject, "Temperance." The B. Y. P. U. meeting at seven o'clock will be a fireside discussion of special interest to all.

Remember, "We preach the whole Bible, not a Bible full of holes."

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCHES

"Christ Jesus" was the subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, August 28.

The Golden Text was, "Jesus Christ the same yesterday, and to day, and for ever" (Heb. 13:8).

Among the citations which comprised the Lesson-Sermon was the following from the Bible: "And Jesus went about all Galilee, teaching in their synagogues, and preaching the gospel of the kingdom, and healing all manner of sickness and all manner of disease among the people" (Matt. 4:23).

The Lesson-Sermon also included the following passages from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "In healing the sick and sinning, Jesus elaborated the fact that the healing effect followed the understanding of the divine Principle and of the Christ-spirit which governed the corporeal Jesus." "The Principle of divine metaphysics is God; the practice of divine metaphysics is the utilization of the power of Truth over error; its rules demonstrate its Science" (pp.141, 111).

do before in his life. He had not been able to make the U.S.C. track team in a number of meets because he was not quite good enough. Another thing extraordinary about this event was the fact that the first four men in the high jump were coached by Cromwell of U. S. C. They were MacNaughton of Canada, Van Osdel of the U. S., Torribo of the Philippines, and Johnson, a colored high school boy of Los Angeles. All events were exciting and most of them were very close. Approximately forty thousand people remained to see Bausch of the U. S. set a new world record. They stayed until 7:30 and missed their dinners, which is also probably a world record, or at least a new American record. Some races were so very close that it was nearly impossible for the judges to pick the winners. After they reversed their original decision after looking at the moving picture in several pictures the first two men hit the tape at nearly the same time it is a hard thing to pick out any outstanding event. Every event was packed with thrills from start to finish. The relay men, in the four hundred meter relay, averaged 10 seconds on each hundred meter, running it in forty seconds flat while in the hundred meter the best time was only 16 and 3 tenths, which at that was a new world record. In the trials in both relays the world's record was broken and in the finals the new world's record was broken. In the discuss one man set five new records in six consecutive heaves. In every event but three or four the world record or the Olympic record was broken, or in most cases both records were broken. The stellar performance of Mildred Babe Didrickson was probably the outstanding individual accomplishment. She has won for herself the name of the girl track team and one great sporting authority, Grantland Rice, says "she is the outstanding athletic phenomenon of all time—man or woman."

This has been a unique Olympic. First because of the numbers of records broken; second because it is the first time that any nation was able to take a sweep in any one event. This was accomplished by the United States twice and by Finland once. Thirdly, it is the first time that any Olympic games have been a success financially. The record breaking crowds in this time of depression is a tribute to the organization of the leaders of these games who spent time and money in order to make it a success. A large number of American people are probably planning to attend the next Olympic which will be held in Berlin in 1936, and already Berlin has accepted the challenge of Los Angeles that when bigger and better Olympic games are held, she will hold them.

Eye-witness Tells of Records Made

All contests were very exciting. The first four men placing in the high-jump cleared the bar at six feet, five and one-eighth inches. These men tried at higher height but could not seem to make the leap. After a number of jumps at six feet five and one-eighth in which they all made that height, two missed that height. It then settled down to an endurance contest between MacNaughton of Canada and Van Osdel of the U. S. MacNaughton finally won out. There is a little story connected with this contest. MacNaughton and Van Osdel are students at the University of Southern California. They are the best of friends. After each jump they would encourage each other with a sincerity seldom seen in our modern close competition. The rather strange thing about it was that MacNaughton jumped several inches better than he had been able to

STRAWBERRY CROWN MOTH DESCRIBED IN BULLETIN.

If your strawberry plants are looking weak and de-vitalized during August and September, perhaps the trouble is that the crowns of the plants are serving as the playground for from 20 to 60 larvae of the strawberry crown moth. This is the time of year when the effects of infestation by this pest are beginning to show up, as the little borers grow by feeding on the plant crowns.

The full description of this serious strawberry pest so common in Oregon, together with all the information known to date concerning control, is contained in a new bulletin recently issued by the experimental station at Corvallis entitled "The Strawberry Crown Moth," by J. Wilcox, K. W. Gray and D. C. Mote.

Though considerable work has been done with this pest, control measures are still far from perfect, the bulletin shows. Study of the pest was started in earnest in 1927 at the urgent request of growers who were suffering severe losses. The present bulletin is a progress report of the project up to date, issued to afford the growers the latest information available.

The control tests indicate that topping and covering the plants with straw are of value in preventing infestation. Prevention affords about the only protection, as once the moth deposits its eggs and the young begin to work, little if anything can be done about it.

Several methods of topping the plants so as to leave some "trap rows" to attract the moths away from the main patch are described in the bulletin. Plants left untop-
