Christmas Carolers and the Seal.

The little Christmas seals, which this year show two children singing the Christmas carol, are now going out to fight the grim, great, terrible dragon of the white plague, the dragon of tuberculosis.

The money from the seal sale in Umatilla county is expended largely in this county and has a large share in keeping the local health nurse on the job.

The seals also assist in financing milk, dental care and clothes for needy children threatened with tuberculosis as well as for clinic, nurses, X-rays, and tuberculin tests.

This is not to tell you that you must buy seals. It is only to remind you that you should. They typify all that is best in mankind, making war against a disease that is destructive of happiness, and homes, and life.

Canst Thou Beat It!

Under this heading, the Dufur Dispatch last week reprinted in its Press Clippings column, the following article from the Portland (Mich.) Observer:

Behold, the young one growth p and graduateth. And, the editor loth straightway putteth in the paper a notice. He telleth of the wisdom of the young woman and of her exceeding comeliness.

Behold, she returneth, and the youth of the town fall down and worship. She picketh one and lo, she picketh a lemon.

BEEKEEPERS LAUNCH BIG 5-YEAR PROGRAM OF WORK.

Beekeepers have adopted a five-year program of activities by which it is hoped greatly to strengthen the industry in this state, reports H. A. Scullen, bee specialist at Oregon State college who has been reelected secretary of the state organization.

This program is a six-point one and includes increased membership, better disease control through state supervision, standardization and grading of Oregon honey, more advertising of honey as a food, continued exhibits at the state fair and Pacific International, continued support and ultimate expansion of the work of the Pacific Slope bee experiment station.

J. Skovbo of Hermiston is the new president and S. D. Williams, Portland, vice-president.

Girl Scout Leaders Aid Nation's Needy, Serving on Welfare and Relief Group

MRS. FREDERICK EDEY • MRS. NICHOLAS F. BRADY • MRS. ROBERT G. MEAD

Eight members of the national Girl Scout organization will serve on the National Women's Committee which has been organized under the honorary chairmanship of Mrs. Herbert Hoover and the chairmanship of Mrs. Nicholas F. Brady to help in the welfare and relief mobilization of 1932.

The committee, which will include one thousand women from every state in the Union, is a division of the National Citizens' Committee, of which Mr. Newton D. Baker is chairman.

All the women serving are already active in the social work, representing between them some thirty national agencies.

"The duties of these committee members," according to Mrs. Brady, "will be the organization of committees in their own localities to reinforce campaigns for funds, the dissemination of information regarding needs and the continuous interpretation of the whole social program so that there will be no overlooking and as little as possible overlapping of essential services. They will act as a spur to the slothful giver, an inspiration to the active worker and a bond of union between those functioning in different but allied fields."

"There is no time or place," Mrs. Brady explained, "at which the work of these committees cannot be done. The members can tell the story of the need in their homes, their offices, to their friends and their business acquaintances. They will, naturally, function largely through the organizations to which they belong and, above all, they will do so through the churches, where they will be sure of whole-hearted support for a work which allows no dividing line on a basis of religion, politics, race or class."

Mrs. Hoover and Mrs. Brady have asked the following officers of the Girl Scouts to serve on the National Women's committee: Mrs. Frederick Edey and Mrs. Edgar Rickard, of New York, respectively president and treasurer of the Girl Scouts; Mrs. Frederick Brooke, Washington, D. C.; Dr. Lillian M. Gilbreth, Montclair, N. J.; Mrs. Vance McCormick, Harrisburg, Pa.; and Mrs. Nathan Miller, wife of the former governor of New York, members of the Girl Scout board; Mrs. Robert G. Mead, president of the Girl Scout Federation of Greater New York, and Mrs. John Cavanaugh, of Newwalk, Conn., members of the New England Regional committee.
