ENTERPRISE—"When I am fixing apples for salad or pie," volunteers a Wallowa county housewife, "I use the apple peeler, then take the apples on the grater. I do not core them but grate them as close to the core as possible. I find this an easy and quick method of preparing apples."

DEMAND INSTEAD OF SUPPLY BIG FACTOR IN FARM SLUMP.

Both the general level of farm prices and the index of factory payrolls in the United States have declined 60 percent since October, 1929, according to the monthly summary of the trend of demand, prices and costs of farm products just released by the agricultural extension service.

In commenting on this fact, L. R. Breithaupt, college extension economist, said, "The decline in the purchasing power of consumers appears to be much more of a reason for the great decline in farm prices than the slight changes which have occurred in the total supply of farm products from year to year."

The report points out that more than the usual seasonal increase has occurred since August in industrial production, factory employment and payrolls, and in general business activity. On the other hand, all of the gains made in the general level of wholesale prices from June to September have been lost and the general level of farm prices has declined over 5 percent since mid-September.

The position of Federal Reserve member banks to make loans has continued to improve, but actual bank loans outside of New York City, and New York commercial interest rates, have continued to decline.

Some encouragement is to be had because the decline in farm prices has been partly offset by lower prices for commodities bought by farmers. However, the cost of producing farm products has not declined nearly as much as farm income, says the report.

The index of Oregon farm prices was given at 45 percent of the average level from 1926 to 1930, with the United States average at 42. Compared with the pre-war level of farm prices, the index for the whole country was 59 percent. The index of prices paid by farmers was 107 percent of pre-war compared with 122 a year ago and 153 as the average from 1926 to 1930.

from the Oregon Forest nursery at Corvallis this fall in planting windbreaks, shelter belts and woodlots. Species recommended for this county are Western Yellow Pine, Black Locust, Douglas Fir, Port Orford Cedar, and Western Red Cedar. These and other sprays may be had for about a fourth of a cent a tree in large quantities.

the next 30 days, reports County Agent J. C. Leedy. This disease is easily controlled by a thorough application of bordeaux mixture 6-6-50 if applied while all the twigs are entirely dormant, hence the move here to get the spray on during December before there is any chance of springing buds.
