ORPHEUM'S CHRISTMAS FEATURE AT OASIS.

Constance Bennett's latest picture, "Rockabye", which will be shown at the Portland Orpheum Christmas week, will be on the Oasis screen this Friday, Saturday and Sunday.

During her screen experience Miss Bennett has played a wide range of parts and in "Rockabye" the role of Judy Carroll gives her a splendid opportunity to display her versatile talents. An atmosphere of sophistication and elegance supply the proper background for her beauty and gorgeous array of clothes which, as usual, are pleasing to the eye as well as an index to feminine styles.

The story deals with the hectic love career of an actress, Judy Carroll, born in the slums of New York City, who, through the efforts of her manager, has risen to fame; then a scandal that smothered her fame with notoriety. Having reached the height of her stage career and desiring the experience of domesticity and motherhood more than anything else in life, she pauses to adopt a child and to consider a love marriage. But it seems that real happiness is not for her as her shady past is ever rising to humiliate her and defeat her plans. Just what sacrifices are demanded of a woman who has had a past that can't be forgotten is the question that confronts her as she is about to realize her long cherished dream of happiness and the emotional turmoil that she goes thru before she finds the answer to this age old question makes you sniff and bring out the old hanky.

Other members of the cast who do fine work are Joel McCrea, Paul Lukas and Jobyna Howland. In addition to this feature there is a short mystery playlet, "Mystery of Compartment C" and a cartoon comedy.

ANSWER TO LAST WEEK'S "YOU'D BE SURPRISED." Shakespeare specified Othello as a Moor, but is mistaken in calling him a black man. Moore are a white race, tanned by the sun.
