State "Dignitaries."

The highlights of Tuesday's state news in the state capital at Salem was the open "wordy brawl" staged between Governor Julius L. Meier and State Treasurer Rufus C. Holman.

It is generally believed, and confirmed by Webster, that one who holds exalted rank or office may be called a "dignitary."

solving some of the grave problems confronting it.

Perhaps the task of running a state government is "child's play" in which the participants consider their individual whims and disagreements more important than the problems confronting the government.

Even if the Governor and the State Treasurer were elected to their office by a large majority of the voters in Oregon, there is no law prohibiting those same voters from becoming disgusted with those same officers when they display such childish banter and ballyhoo.

The apology offered by Holman for his conduct does not alter the opinion of many that our state lacks "dignitaries."

Times Change.

We have been scanning the country press for 36 years. Ah, well we recall the days of "boiler plate". We had a couple of columns of it which we used to run for weeks at a time.

Pectoral and there was always a cut of the Scientific American to fill in with. Merchants never changed their ads. They used to head their ads with "Live and Let Live."

these retired preachers. Come and enjoy a real old-fashioned service in memory of our other brethren.

Typing Class Makes Record for 10-Minute Writes.

(From the "Bulldog") Red letter day for Typing 1 class was January 11, when six students made perfect records on 10-minute writes.

Jessie Klages made the highest score by averaging 36 words per minute. The previous day, Eunice Woughter almost equaled that record with a perfect score of 35.

Other students making perfect scores were Helen Jendrzewski, 27; Don Serell and Goldie Shutter, 22; Iva Romig, 19; and David Arnott, 12.
