White Federation Grown in Morrow

HEPPNER — White Federation wheat, a variety which seems to be considerably earlier than Federation, is being grown by several Morrow county farmers this year in cooperation with County Agent C. W. Smith. Considerable interest is being shown in the plantings in the north end of the county, which are located on the farms of B. H. Peck, D. W. Cutsforth and A. H. Nelson, Lexington; Ed Ditty, Sand Hollow, and Timm Brothers, Ione. A good stand was obtained in each case, and all growers are high in their praise of White Federation. Mr. Smith says.

*****
Alfalfa Stand Depends on Lime.

DALLAS — Limerock seems to make all the difference between good stands of alfalfa and none at all on the Orren McElmurry farm in the Highland community south of Independence. When J. R. Beck, county agent, visited the farm recently he found that where limerock had been applied the stand was good, with reasonably good growth, but on an adjoining strip where no limerock had been applied many spots were bare and the growth was thin and weak.

THE RED & WHITE STORES

Klamath Grows More Potatoes.

KLAMATH FALLS — Some increase in Klamath potato acreage is expected this season as the result of considerable land being planted where alfalfa was frozen out last year. There has been a greater demand for seed potatoes late in the year than usual. Several potato seed treatment trials have been started recently on the U. E. Reeder and Otto Wabbles farms by the county agent. Comparative results will be noted from the corrosive sublimate, hot formaldehyde and acid-mercury dip methods in disease control.

Coos Bay Herd Scores Again.

COQUILLE—For the second consecutive month, Charles McCulloch of the Coos Bay Herd Improvement association had the high producing herd of all those on test in the state, according to the official test report for the month of May, just released by R. W. Morse, extension dairyman of Oregon State college. Mr. McCulloch has also had the second highest producing cow on test for the past two months.
