

FARM CO-OPERATIVE DIVISION

A MESSAGE TO EVERY MEMBER.

COOPERATORS TO CONSIDER BUILDING COLD STORAGE ROOM.

Somebody will undoubtedly build a cold storage locker room before next spring and the members of the cooperatives feel that they will have to get busy if they are going to own it and keep the profits in their own pockets.

The creamery must have a larger ice machine and cold room to take care of the growing volume of cream and larger output of butter, so it would be very practical and economical to include a cold room for the purpose of renting lockers to the farmers.

The members of the Umatilla Co-operative Creamery who would not rent a locker would have no share of the expense to pay under the proposed plan for the farmers cold room. It would be entirely self supporting and would pay for itself in a short time. Once paid for, the net earnings would be distributed among the creamery members.

A careful survey will be made to determine what the gross income will amount to for the first year of operation. The cost of power and water will also be given careful consideration before any plans are laid for construction of the room.

The rent charged for such locker as other plants now have is very reasonable and these locker rooms are considered indispensable in localities now served.

A sign up of people interested in renting a locker will be conducted at some convenient place in Hermiston as soon as things begin to progress.

DEADLINE NEAR AT HAND FOR JOINING WHEAT PLAN.

September 25 is the deadline for the wheat sign-up.

This definite information from the wheat administration is now being broadcast to every section of the state by the Oregon State college extension service, in charge of the wheat campaign under the farm adjustment act, in order that no wheat grower who would profit by the terms of a government contract will not have an opportunity to join in this voluntary movement to boost the wheat farmers' income.

Special emphasis is being laid on the fact that while the present wheat plan is a three-year program, this is the final opportunity for a grower to join, as after September 25 the lists will be closed until the expiration of the contracts after the harvest of the 1935 crop.

By "deadline" the government means that applications for allotments under the plan must be made by September 25, and not that the actual contracts must be signed. The final contracts themselves need not be in Washington until December 1. Furthermore, final county organizations and actual allotments need not be completed till after the deadline date.

With this situation in mind, county agricultural agents and others officially connected with the campaign, have been spending much time in the field this week assisting growers interested in completing and filing their applications. Any grower interested in obtaining such assistance may get in touch with the county agent or his community committee, as these have been set up in all counties where much wheat is grown.

Latest reports to headquarters at Corvallis show that in the principal wheat counties in eastern Oregon the actual sign-up included 50 to 60 per cent of the growers a week ago, and that by the final day next Monday most of the real wheat counties will show more than 90 per cent sign-up.

In some of the western Oregon counties where wheat production is more incidental or where much of the wheat produced is used locally for feed, the interest is not as great, though even there farmers are finding that they can profit by signing up and getting the assured cash benefit payments in return for taking 15 per cent of their average wheat acreage out of that crop.

Value of Moth Trap Records Shown.

HOOD RIVER—The value of the moth trap records kept regularly by the county agent's office here was clearly demonstrated in August when unexpectedly heavy flights of codling moth, as shown by the bait traps, caused many orchardists to apply a second brood spray, which they had hoped to omit. Without this information, the first warning would have come when growers found a considerable number of new worms entering the apples—too late for a spray to be of much value.

CANNING SCHEDULE.

Day	A.M. 8-11	P.M. 1-3:30	Can
M	Tomatoes	Fruit	No. 2 1/2
T	Fish
W	Tomatoes	Fruit	No. 2 1/2

We thank all who responded and removed their cans, but our store room is still crowded, so we hope others will call for their cans. Our canning season is drawing to a close and our motto is, "An Empty Store Room."

Stanfield Grange News.

The evening of Saturday, September 30, has been designated by the National Grange as booster's night. A short program will be presented in the grange hall after which a social time will follow. There is no special publicity committee, so each grange member is urged to advertise this affair and help make it a success. There will be no business meeting so the program is open to the public, to start at 8:15. Please do not wait for a special invitation, but come if interested.

4-H Clubs.

Members of the 4-H Home Economic clubs brought home many awards from the Umatilla Project fair, held at Hermiston.

In cooking one division the girls won all four ribbons; in cooking two, a first and fourth premium; the sewing two club won first, second and fourth place, and in sewing three, first place.

The list of winners includes Florence Hutton, Nadine Rueber, Virginia and Mildred Gabriel, Dorothy Shelton, Mary Johnson, Claudia Gabriel, Doris Hutton, and Patricia Richards.

CENTRAL BANK FOR COOPERATIVES ESTABLISHED.

Washington, D. C., Sept. 20.—The Central Bank for Cooperatives was established here today. September 13, 1933, at the first meeting of its Board of Directors, with the delivery of its charter and subscription of $50,000,000 initial capital by Governor Henry Morgenthau, Jr., in behalf of the Farm Credit Administration, Mr. Morgenthau announced.

The bank will have the jurisdiction over loans to cooperative marketing and selling associations borrowing more than $500,000 and also all loans to association operating on a national scale. Its creation was provided for by the Farm Credit Act of 1933.

The Cooperative Bank Commissioner of the Farm Credit Administration became chairman as provided by law. John D. Miller, of the National Cooperative Council, Susquehanna, Pa., was elected vice-chairman, and U. M. Dickey, president of the United Dairymen's association, Seattle, Wn., was elected executive committee member. Mr. Peck and Mr. Miller are also executive committee members.

Directors, besides Mr. Peck, Mr. Miller and Mr. Dickey, are Thomas Cooper, Dean of the College of Agriculture, Lexington, Ky., H. Lane Young, executive manager of the Citizens and Southern National Bank, Atlanta, Ga., H. E. Babeock, president of the Cooperative G.L.F. Holding Corporation, Ithaca, N. Y., and F. M. Hayner, director of the Southwestern Irrigated Cotton Growers association, El Paso, Texas.

All new loans to cooperative associations will be made by the Central Bank for Cooperatives or by one of the 12 regional banks for cooperatives, one of which will be established in each land bank city. The regional banks for cooperatives for St. Louis, Missouri and Berkeley, Calif., have been established. Others are to be established as rapidly as possible.

Intert Shown in Canary Grass.

ST. HELENS—Because of the extremely high water of this past summer, Columbia county farmers are showing keen interest in reed canary grass for pasture and forage on the thousands of acres of Columbia river overflow land adapted to this crop, reports George A. Nelson, county agent. Fourteen farmers who accompanied Mr. Nelson on a visit to the Columbia Stock ranch at Goble recently found that the canary grass there had not been affected by the heavy freeze last winter, and after standing under water for nearly two months prior to the inspection was making a good growth. Three acres was furnishing sufficient pasture for 10 head of stock, and on 12 acres being kept for hay the grass was from 14 to 16 inches high.

Machinery, Economics and Religion

Excerpts from an address by H. A. Wallace, Secretary of Agriculture, before World Fellowship of Faiths Conference, Chicago.

One of the objects of most religions is to bring about the creation here on earth of the kingdom which exists in the heaven world. For 1900 years it seemed that the realization here on earth of anything in the nature of the Lord's Prayer or the Sermon on the Mount was sheer nonsense and impossible from an economic or material point of view. Today we know the thing is easily possible from a material point of view, and that the essential requisites are first, really up-to-date social machinery, and second, sympathetic human hearts to perfect and run that machinery.

We have been attempting in Washington, since March 4, to invent and operate modern, social machinery. Considering the shortness of time, and the pressure, I think we have done a fairly good job. But looking at the problem from a longer time point of view, I have no doubt that the 1933 models of social machinery are as imperfect as the automobile models of 1900. The early automobiles were crude, clumsy affairs, but by infinite patience we perfected them. In like manner, I am confident once the genius of our people is turned in that direction, we can perfect our social machinery.

Everywhere in General Johnson's organization you hear about the concept of balance between productive power and consumptive power. Steadily the effort is being made to produce a statistical measure of social equities. The assumption is continually being made that once we know the social equities in a precise, definite way, the right-thinking people of all classes will be willing to promote the operation of social machinery to bring about such equities. Thoughtful business men now know in a real, and not in a pious, superficial way that these things must be done if we are to have the balanced, continuously prosperous civilization which our scientific understanding and our mechanical powers so clearly entitle us to have.

And now I would like to talk about the second requirement, which is the one in which religious people are most interested, "sympathetic human hearts." In this field, neither science nor economics functions so very satisfactorily. I am confident that the newly created social machinery of the New Deal will soon be discarded unless the hearts of our people are willing to operate this machinery for the general good. The adversity of the past three years has made the great majority willing to enter into a vast cooperative effort on a scale never before dreamed of. It seems to me rather obvious, however, that while the American people have learned something as a result of their adversity and are willing to pull together to get out of it, they have not yet fully learned their lesson. All too many of them still hope to make money by speculation. All too many are still grabbing exploits at heart. The millennium is not yet here although the makings of it are clearly in our hands.

The one essential thing, even above the perfecting of new social machinery, is the remaking of the human heart. We know that the attitudes of men can change almost in the twinkling of an eye and that the attitude of Luther, Calvin, and Wesley was communicated to millions of people. It is worth while to pause and pay tribute to such great spiritual leadership as Luther and Calvin. They doubtless acted appropriately to the abuses of their days. They have furnished untold millions with the spiritual strength necessary to meet the adversities of the rapidly changing economic world.

But today the problem has shifted. We are no longer faced with the problems of material scarcity. It no longer suffices, therefore, to strengthen the spiritual powers of the individual with the simple doctrine of the Psalms of David. The Time has now come for the striking of a more universal note. This is especially necessary from the world point of view, because never before have the different nations been so moved to act as separate national entities. It is time to hold aloft a compelling ideal which will appeal to all nations alike.

I am sure that all of the noble religions of the world have in them a teaching of this sort. In the Christian religion you will find it in the Sermon on the Mount, and in some
