DECISION REACHED ON DAIRY PRODUCTION CONTROL

A decision on the Pacific coast attitude toward production control in the dairy industry was reached at the western conference held at Oakland, Cal., recently, constituting the most important development for western dairymen under the A.A.A. to date, in the opinion of the dairy specialists at Oregon State college.

With the dairy industry faced with the greatest surplus of stored products in history, the agricultural adjustment administration has determined that emergency measures must be followed by production control. The western dairy representatives at Oakland, including many from Oregon, agreed with this but declared that no such plan will be received by the dairy farmers of the country which does not include the elimination of foreign vegetable oils from use as human food. Restriction of such manufacture to fats and oils produced in the United States was asked.

Elimination of surplus cows was suggested as the most feasible means of reducing production. This can be profitably accomplished by two means, the conference decided. One is the immediate compulsory eradication of bovine tuberculosis. The second is the immediate voluntary testing for contagious abortion.

Specialists at Oregon State college point out that Oregon is now practically free from bovine T.B. and well along with contagious abortion, though the latter is an economic rather than a human health problem. The conference further decided that any such elimination of surplus cows, affecting as it would between one and a half to two million cows in this country, would have to be carried out by the government in such a manner as to not depress further the beef market.

The conference set up a permanent western council with one member from each state, and asked that each state set up a committee of its own.

Tornado Is Most Frequent Disaster; Causes Heavy Loss of Lives

What type of disaster occurs most frequently in the United States?

This question is answered from the relief annals of the American Red Cross which show over a period of years that the tornado, or cyclone as it is called in some sections, is the most frequent and claims a heavy toll of life. It swoops almost without warning, and in the terrific whirlpool of its fierce winds it destroys all in its path.

The Red Cross gave relief in 44 tornadoes in eighteen states last year. The tornadoes killed 326 persons, injured 2,755 and the Red Crose gave aid to 21,738 who were homeless, injured or otherwise victims of the storms.

Toll of the Earthquake

When a severe earthquake killed 95 persons; injured 4,911 and destroyed several thousand homes in Southern California last March, the Red Cross was first upon the ground with emergency relief. It required more than three months for the Red Cross to restore the needy to a self-sustaining basis. The organization expended a relief fund of $411,000.

Serves Under Five Presidents

John Barton Payne, a retired judge and lawyer of international reputation, is serving his twelfth year as chairman of the American Red Cross. His service is without pay, and his appointment is by the President of the United States. He has served by appointment in high public office under five presidents—Wilson, Harding, Coolidge, Hoover and Roosevelt.

THIS representation of what the world will offer the wheat farmer for his wheat shows clearly the relationship between supply and price. Since 1928, when the world supplies of wheat first became burdensome the price has been low for the most part. The pictures at the top of the chart show that when the supply is low, the world will pay a good price for wheat, but when supplies are too big, the world won't pay as much. As the supplies (shown by the black bars) have climbed, the price (represented by the shaded parts) has sunk lower. The wheat administration seeks to bring the wheat supply of the United States into line with demand by reducing acreage, and thus to make the price nearer parity, that is, the point at which the return from a bushel of wheat will buy as much as it did in the pre-war period, 1909-1914. The 1933 crop year is not far enough advanced to show definitely what prices will be.
