Push a Feasible Project.

There are a number of reasons why the time is ripe to press for the cause of the Umatilla rapids dam. We might enumerate a few of them under heads one, two and three.

1. Through constant and constructive work the Umatilla rapids dam project on the Columbia has been brought to the attention of influential men at Washington, D. C., and because of that has been included in a report recommending to congress early consideration of six regional rivers and waterpower projects at an ultimate cost of more than $390,000,000. The report includes the Columbia river development by naming the Umatilla dam and locks with an allocation of $30,000,000.

Individual community units cannot accomplish the same results as those joining organizations which have sufficient influence to reach men in authority. E. P. Dodd of Hermiston, because of his consistent pushing for the river program and through his wide acquaintance in political circles, has been able to make the Columbia river development an issue. It should be kept so.

2. Because President Roosevelt will visit Oregon and the Pacific coast in the near future, and because he is acquainted with the facts about the Columbia river development, he will be able to see the great possibilities of further development on the Columbia river. He should not be allowed to forget it.

3. Last but not least is the fact that the people of Oregon have a gubernatorial candidate who is in complete sympathy with the river program and has pledged his support to back it if elected. Joe E. Dunne, republican candidate for governor, has given his support and we believe with him at the helm of our state government, it will be possible to put the complete river program over. On the other hand, we know what has been done in the past by our representatives at Washington who have swung their support and influence to the interest in the metropolitan centers.

The possibilities for building the Umatilla dam look more feasible at present than they have since the first survey was made ten years ago. Why drop it now?

False Economy.
 (From Hood River News)

Every once in a while a legislator, making debut at Salem, casts near and far in the hope of being able to sponsor an economy bill which will bring his undying fame. He thinks of a number of possibilities, only to find that he may be treading on some other legislator's toes and, at the same time, impairing his chances for votes on any bill he may introduce in behalf of his own electors. If he is wise, he then abandons hope insofar as general economy measures are concerned.

But if he is lacking in wisdom, he probes deeper and finally decides that there would be real economy in a bill to prevent publication in newspapers of county court proceedings and other information as to how taxpayers' money is being expended, and he has high hopes for the success of such a measure until wiser heads swamp it.

Through the columns of newspapers we learn of scandals and defalcations on the part of public officials and, while the newspapers do not report this angle, it inevitably transpires that these scandals and defalcations would not have been possible had it not been that the light of publicity was extinguished, and the resultant darkness made it easy for an erring official to get deeply into the taxpayers before an impartial accountant presented his report to the grand jury.

It may cost a small sum of money each month to keep taxpayers informed on the various channels through which public monies are expended, but officials who have nothing to hide welcome the opportunity to keep taxpayers informed on this vitally important matter. And wise taxpayers will not support at any time any measure which would conceal from them an itemized balance sheet of income and expenditure of the various public departments through which their money goes.

121 LOANS APPROVED BY P.C.A. IN OREGON.

Production Credit associations in Oregon had 121 loans approved for the four week period ended June 1 by the International Credit Bank of Spokane, according to figures received today from the Farm Credit administration serving the Pacific northwest. Eighty-five loans were closed during the same period.

In the states of Washington, Montana, Oregon and Idaho making up the 12th Farm Credit administration district, 1203 loans were approved and 915 closed.

The difference between the loans approved and the loans closed represents the volume still in the hands of the local PCA's awaiting their completion of the papers necessary to closing. These operations include the obtaining of the chattel abstracts, getting the notes and chattel mortgage signed, and forwarding of all necessary papers to the Intermediate Credit bank.

Among the citations which comprised the Lesson-Sermon was the following from the Bible: "For the invisible things of him from the creation of the world are clearly seen, being understood by the things that are made, even his eternal power and Godhead" (Rom. 1:20).

The Lesson-Sermon also included the following correlative passages from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "From the infinite elements of the one Mind emanate all form, color, quality, and quantity, and these are mental, both primarily and secondarily.
