Observations of field men who have made cost of production studies show that not more than a fourth to a third of Oregon farmers have kept any form of written accounts in the east. Most of these keep only records of receipts and expenses rather than making summaries of their various enterprises and for the whole farm at the beginning of the year.

"The AAA has called attention to the need of some record which will aid individually and collectively in getting more reliable data for future use and which will help farmers eliminate weak spots in their business and encourage the strong ones," Kuhlman continued.

"In the country as a whole the AAA has provided two and one-half million farmers with these record books and has arranged with the extension services for any necessary aid in starting the work. It has frankly stated, however, that the contracting farmer need not use that particular book if he prefers any other one, possibly one more complete.

"Many Oregon farmers who have always kept regular account books are continuing with them and plan to transfer the necessary information to the AAA books for whatever inspection may be made. Others just starting are choosing to begin with the more complete extension service book which provides convenient space for labor records, summaries by enterprises, blanks for keeping possible income tax data adapted to Oregon's laws and other material not provided for in the more abridged AAA account book," Kuhlman concluded.

County agents have copies of both kinds of books available in their local offices.

Teachers from forty states will gather in Chicago, beginning June 21 for a thrilling week attending the 1934 Century of Progress Exposition before splitting into the eastern and western divisions for the two-months journeys which will span the continent.

Included among the wonders of nature which the tourists will visit are the Grand Canyon, Yosemite National Park, Carlsbad Caverns, Yellowstone National Park, Canada's majestic Vancouver Island, Pikes Peak, the California Coast, the Painted Desert, and the Petrified Forest. The teachers will travel under three flags as they tour the United States, Mexico and Canada.

From the quaint old-world atmosphere of French Quebec to the golden sands of sunny Florida, the eastern group will visit the out-of-doors marvels and large cities of the Atlantic coast. New York, with her canyons of commerce; Washington, the Athens of America; Boston, hub-city of Colonial America; New Orleans, with her crooked foreign streets bordered with green-shuttered and scroll-worked French houses; all of these American meccas will be stopping points for the happy wanderers of the 1934 University of Tours expeditions.
