There'll Never be a "Last Round-Up"! Famous Pendleton Show 25 Years Old

Dr. Wilson D. McNary, president of the 1934 Pendleton Round-Up, (left) and J. Roy Raley, president of the first Round-Up held in 1910, are telling young Jack Sweck why the traditions of the Round-Up must be cherished. In the background, scene from the first Round-Up, The Silver Jubilee Round-Up dates are September 13, 14 and 15.

The Round-Up, Pendleton's historic show that keeps the glamour of the old, wild West alive, will celebrate its twenty-fifth (Silver Jubilee) anniversary September 13, 14, and 15. An honorary order of "Pendleton Top Hands" is now being organized in Pendleton, with its members pledged to perpetuate the Pendleton Round-Up through succeeding generations. The brilliant pageantry of range sports that made the shout of "Let 'er Buck!" known around the world in the Round-Up's quarter of a century of history will thrill the throngs at Pendleton again this year. Having weathered the past three trying years with colors flying and the dauntless spirit of Til Taylor still in the saddle, the Pendleton Round-Up emerges this year with a greater show than ever.

A new thrilling event, the "wild ride," will be added to this year's three day show with 12 vicious bucking horses mounted and bucking in the arena simultaneously, all released from the snubbing boxes at the same instant. Perhaps the greatest parade ever held at Pendleton will be seen this year, for George Strand, director of parades, is collecting additional historic buckboards, stage coaches, freight wagons, pack train equipment and other priceless relics of early day transportation. The usual colorful Indian features of the parade will be maintained.

The "Westward Ho" parade will be held Friday, September 14, instead of Saturday as has been the custom at previous Round-Ups. To those who have attended the Round-Up for years, this is of special importance, for real dyed-in-the-wool Round-Up visitors never wants to miss the spectacle of the great "Westward Ho" parade. In 1910 when Pendleton citizens felt that the modern West was arriving and the old, wild West was disappearing, the first Round-Up was held. The incorporators were Max Baer, (no relation to the present heavyweight champion), Will Ingram, Leon Cohen, J. H. Gwinn and J. H. McAllister. The first president was J. Roy Raley and the first treasurer was Roy W. Rittner, this year's business manager of the Round-Up. Fred W. Steiwer, now in the United States Senate, was on the first Round-Up board, with Til Taylor, last of the truly great sheriffs of the old West, Roy Bishop of the Pendleton Woolen Mills, and L. G. Frazier, who is now serving his 25th year on the Round-Up board. This year's president of the Round-Up is Dr. Wilson D. McNary, who served also in 1933. The past presidents were Henry W. Collins, Tillman D. Taylor and J. Roy Raley.

The first year's Round-Up surprised Pendleton with a gathering of 10,000 visitors which taxed the housing facilities of the city until every private home was filled. The budget for the first year's Pendleton Round-Up was only $2,650, whereas budgets of succeeding years were between $20,000 and $80,000, as the show grew in size and world-wide renown.

The first "Happy Canyon" night pageant was held in 1911 and, depicting the conquest of the West, has proven, year after year, a worthy companion to the thrilling arena events of the day. This year, as in previous years, some of the world's greatest cowboys—bucking horse riders, bull-doggers, ropers and relay riders will be competing for generous cash prizes and coveted championship trophies. Pendleton's famous string of bucking horses is being supplemented with new ones that are expected to gain fame equal to that of Roosevelt Trophy, Long Tom, Philip Rollins, No Name and other almost unconquerable buckers whose performances have helped establish the Pendleton Round-Up as the "greatest of them all."

Livestock Director Herbert Thompson has found some new bucking horses and is still picking them up wherever a truly sensational bucking horse can be discovered.
