TEN CARLOADS LOCAL WATERMELONS SHIPPED THIS WEEK.

Ten carloads of locally grown watermelons have been shipped this week by Al Bolstad who has leased 60-acres from A. W. Moser which he planted to melons. Five of the ten cars went to Portland markets and five to eastern markets. Mr. Bolstad estimated, that during the peak season next week, between 20 and 25 cars will be shipped. The market has ranged around $17 a ton, he said.

Fifteen men and two trucks have been working in the melon harvest.

Mr. Bolstad has grown melons at Boardman for the past three years but has never entered into this field on such a commercial scale. This is the largest commercial melon growing ever attempted on this project. All the melons are of fine quality and are bringing top market price.

C. Hartwig, with a Portland commercial clearance house, believes there is a future for commercial melon growing on the project, local melons are boosted and advertised sufficiently.

JOHNSON WALLOPS HYDEN IN TUESDAY'S SMOKER

Dave Johnson of Boardman gave Tiny Hyden, Chicago CCC, a terrific wallop in the bout staged at the Hermiston auditorium Tuesday, August 7, promoted by Joe Quick. Johnson started strong and was giving the best he had to Hyden when he complained of being hit low. After a doctor examined him he was given five minutes rest. The decision was given to Johnson.

George Twilliger of Walla Walla was awarded a technical knockout in the opening minute of the third round against Cliff Mytinger of Pendleton. Buster Rands challenged Twilliger to a bout at Boardman, August 24.

In the fight between Emil Sater and Red Thompson of Hermiston a draw was called. The first round went to Sater, but Thompson came in a little stronger in the second with a few upper cuts. Both tired readily and the referee called a draw.

Shinkle was given the decision in the fight—Shinkle 147, Umatilla, vs. O'Brien CCC, 145. Shinkle knocked O'Brien down four times in the opening minute of play apparently unable to put up defense.

In the special event between Shorty Williams vs. Wildcat Turner, the fans cheered from the opening minute of battle. The referee stopped the fight in the second round.

As an opening event Hobby Quick and young Whitsett battled, but were stopped after the first round when Quick battered Whitsett.

Logan Todd acted as referee.

FILM DRAMA OF HISTORY IS BRILLIANT; AT OASIS.

"Catherine the Great," another brilliant historical film drama from the London studio that produced "The Private Life of Henry VIII," which plays at the Oasis Sunday and Monday, introduces a new screen personality of charm and splendid ability in Elizabeth Bergner and presenting Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., in the most important achievement of his career.

The new film refrains from the broad comedy that kept "Henry VIII" on the borderland of farce and devotes itself rather to the skillful development of a dramatic story in a background of the barbarous splendor and license of the court of old Russia.

The picture makes no pretense of following history, save in the facts that Catherine was a German girl who became the wife and later the successor of a czar named Peter.

The empress as portrayed by Miss Bergner is a young woman of deep and single devotion to her husband, patiently suffering ignominy and abuse at his hands, and wrestling the throne from the erratic frenzies of a madman.

Young Fairbanks gives a splendid performance in the unsympathetic character of the grand duke who becomes czar, a terrible and pathetic creature with a warped mind full of surging ambition, brooding suspicions and violent passions. The other role of importance is that of the Empress Elizabeth, played convincingly by Flora Robson.
