

ANNUAL TURKEY TOUR INSPIRATIONAL TO MANY GROWERS

LOCAL ASSOCIATION LEADS IN FIRST ORGANIZED TOUR.

Four Farms Visited; Original Song Makes Hit at Picnic; Marketing Volume Said to be Steady.

The fourth annual turkey tour of the Eastern Oregon Turkey Growers association which was staged Saturday, August 18, included the Umatilla Experiment Station, the Kelley-Boynnton farm, the Merrill Potter farm and the E. G. Tilden farm. The local association was one of the first in the state to organize such a tour, and at least seven have been organized since in the state of Oregon.

At the experiment station, Superintendent H. K. Dean explained the economic possibilities in using either coal or electric brooders, and explained feed charts showing that economical feeding is not always cheap feeding. Flocks that have been fed high protein mash have shown a gradual increase in weight as the season advances. He advised growers to add sweet milk to the ration if birds are being fed wheat or corn alone. Mr. Dean said that milk, fed under sanitary conditions, aided in curbing disease.

The tour next visited the Kelley-Boynnton farm where a flock of 2750 birds were viewed. Neil Boynnton explained that they had experienced only seven per cent loss this season. Two brooder houses were used, he said, one large brooder with underground heat which accommodated five large pens with outside range, taking care of 250 birds to a pen. The total cost of brooding the entire flock was estimated at $35. Brinquettes and wood were used for fuel. The average weight of the three and quarter-quarter month old birds was estimated as being 15 pounds.

Labor Saving Devices.
At the Merrill Potter farm growers were shown many labor saving devices contrived by Mr. Potter in his incubating system, brooder houses and on the range. In the brooder houses Mr. Potter had arranged a heat circulating pipe connected with a kerosene burner, in one end of the house. The burners are boxed on the outside and can be regulated without disturbing the birds as they range at liberty. The temperature under the pipe is kept at a high degree. Mr. Potter explained in the belief that it prevented crowding.

Running water keeps water bins sanitary with underground drainage system, and the birds range on alfalfa. Mr. Potter estimates his present flock to number 1000 birds. A flock of 450 Narraganset turkeys were seen at the E. G. Tilden farm. These birds were brooded in an insulated house supplied with underground heat. No covers were used in brooding because of the even temperature maintained in the building.

Picnic Terminates Tour.
The tour terminated at Columbia park where a picnic dinner was served, with roast turkey, ice cream and coffee furnished by the association. (Continued on Page 3)

HERMISTON HOP HARVEST WILL START SEPTEMBER 8

NEW LOCKRIDGE HOP KILN WILL HANDLE CROP.

New Yards in Columbia and Stanfield District This Year; Production Expected to be Average.

The Hermiston hop crop will soon be rolling into the new kiln recently completed at the O. T. Lockridge hop yard southeast of town. Mr. Lockridge expects to harvest his crop starting September 8, and will employ 75 pickers and balers.

Mr. Lockridge anticipates that his crop will double that of last year with a ton and a quarter production per acre average on the eight acres. The 1933 crop of baby hops averaged four tons for the entire season and this is the second year of production for the yard.

The new kiln will be used to dry and bale hops harvested on the new yards at the Bill Whitsett place in Columbia district and the Paul Miller place near Stanfield. The production on these new yards is estimated for both at 12 to 14 tons. It takes 16 or 18 hours to dry 1400 pounds of hops Mr. Lockridge says, and each crop will be dried and baled separately. Mr. Lockridge shipped his hops into Washington to be dried and baled last year.

Hop growing on the Hermiston and Stanfield projects is a comparatively new industry but was considered to be successful enough to warrant additional investment for another year. It is predicted that hop growing will be one of the major industries on the project in the future.

RESULTS OF RABBIT POISONING CAMPAIGN NOW BEING SEEN

The rabbit poisoning campaign being staged in the west end of Umatilla county in the Stanfield, Hermiston, Columbia and Butter creek districts will close soon. The Umatilla county court allowed $50 to finance the campaign which has been used to distribute bait in these districts. Poison was distributed in sections of the Westland district today (Thursday) which is expected to close the campaign for this season.

A total of 120 ounces of poison has been used in 2400 pounds of chopped green alfalfa as bait, and farmers have expressed themselves as being well pleased with the results. W. A. Sawyer, assistant county agent said today.

Soon after poison bait had been placed in the Stage Gulch district F. S. Green reported that a new seeding of rye grass and sweet clover on his farm had shown a noticeable growth within a few days, when hitherto it had appeared to remain at a standstill. The slow growth was then said to be due to destruction being done by rabbits.
