THE LOGIC OF EVENTS. By Henry N. Harger.

WORDS! WORDS! WORDS! By Henry N. Harger.

For several years Professor Johnson O'Connor of Stevens Institute has been using vocabulary tests in determining whether a knowledge of words has anything to do with success in business and professional life.

However, although Professor O'Connor's tests are designed primarily to count the number of words a person has in his repertoire, many great works of literature indicate that perhaps just as much stress should be laid on making limited vocabularies accomplish great things.

Literary critics point out that Abraham Lincoln's vocabulary was more along the elastic order. Although the emancipator had a range vocabulary, his speeches and writings reveal that his strength lay in using a limited number of words skillfully.

But on the other hand, although literary tapestries can be made from a few words, there is often a tendency to overwork a word. For example the person who sums everything up with "gorgeous", or is this the word that is running the gauntlet of days? And again the parting shot "a wonderful time" at the hostess—although what else is there to say if one has held low cards all evening or has made the error of trumping his partner's ace.

E. O. WHEAT LEAGUE CLOSES BUSY YEAR; MEETING DATED.

ARLINGTON—With the wheat industry once more on the upgrade after its most serious slump in history, this city is preparing for a record attendance for the eighth annual convention of the Eastern Oregon Wheat League which has been scheduled to meet here December 7 and 8. The second convention of the league was held here in January 1929.

The league has been exceptionally active during the past year in the interests of the Oregon wheat growers," says Charles Smith, secretary of the organization and emergency assistant county agent leader with O.S.C. "We feel that it has lived up to its established purpose of providing an effective medium of expression for the men in one of Oregon's greatest agricultural enterprises."

Under the leadership of President J. B. Adams of Moro, and vice president Mac Hoke of Pendleton, the league assisted in a half dozen successful developments of the past year, Smith reports.

It aided in the successful fight to have the processing tax removed on jute bags and to prevent lowering of present smut tolerances in the new grain grades, Smith reports. It joined in the campaign for sea lock at Bonneville as a means of getting lower cost transportation, and is now engaged with other farm organizations in opposing increased freight rates on farm products.

Assisting in advance preparations for the convention are executive-committeemen representing each of the counties active in the league. These are Charles Harth, Wasco county; Harry Pinkerton, Sherman; Charles Nish, Gilliam; C. B. Cox, Morrow; J. K. Hill, Umatilla; E. L. DeLong, Union; and Glen Tully, Wallawa.
