MANY FEATURES PLANNED FOR OREGON PRESS MEET.

University of Oregon, Eugene, January 15—Newspapermen from all sections of Oregon have shown greater interest than ever before in the program of the seventeenth annual Oregon Press Conference, to be held at the school of journalism at the University of Oregon January 24, 25, and 26, and the program itself promises to be the liveliest and most valuable in the history of the meetings, it is declared by those in charge.

The session will unofficially open Thursday, January 24, with the annual publishers' round table and dinner. While this initial meeting has no set program, a number of vital topics are expected to be brought up for discussion.

Friday the program contains items of interest for both city and small town publishers. Hugh G. Ball, publisher of the Hood River News, will deliver the first talk on "City vs. Country, the Editor's Biggest Problem and Biggest Opportunity." A feature of the first morning will be a talk on "The Circulation Situation in Oregon," by Eric W. Allen, dean of the school of journalism. Dean Allen has made a thorough survey of circulation in an entirely new way, and the results are certain to prove startling to many publishers.

Other highlights of the program are: Friday, January 25—"Do We Know How to Write News?" W. M. Tugman, managing editor, Eugene Register Guard, "How a Community Newspaper can Build Up During Depression," Sol H. Lewis, publisher, Lynden, Wash., Tribune, "What's Ahead?" by Dexter M. Keezer, president of Reed College, "Saving Insurance," by C. L. Kelly, professor of insurance, University of Oregon. Annual banquet, Osborn Hotel, with awards for best papers for 1934, initiation by Sigma Delta Chi, professional journalism society.

Saturday, January 26—Business meeting, Oregon State Editorial Association. "Determining Cost and Selling Price of Commercial Printing," by A. L. Clawson, Oakland, California. "Streamlining Our Rat Card," by Vernon R. Churchill, Portland—Printing Price Institute. A number of entertainment features have also been planned for the event, it has been announced.

OREGON STATE NEWS ITEMS OF INTEREST

Brief Resume of Happenings of the Week Collected for Our Readers

Albany—Payment of $102,654.41 to depositors of the Albany State bank, now in process of liquidation, is in progress.

Umatilla—The late Amos Pond, one of the headmen of the Umatilla tribe, willed his 1000 acres of land to 18 relatives.

Eugene—The Lane county budget committee has voted to mark $1900 for use of the county agricultural agent and a separate $1500 for thistle control work.

Spokane—Five thousand sheep purchased by the federal drought relief administrator were shipped last week from Deschutes county to Spokane, in part, and to points in the North Central states.

Klamath Falls—Leaving the street after a minor collision, an automobile at Klamath Falls climbed the curb, crossed the sidewalk and knocked a pedestrian through the show window of a bakery.

Lebanon—The practice of planting whole tubers and removing all but three sprouts above ground is apparently going to give Hollis Auderway of Lebanon an increased yield of potatoes, reports Floyd C. Mullen, Linn county agent.

Grants Pass—Selection of a site for Grants Pass' $150,000 new federal and postoffice building on the Herman and Everton site, northeast corner of 7th and East H streets, has ended suspense existing since July 23, when 12 sites were offered for the building.

Grants Pass—Gold miners along Rogue river have been warned by E. Reed Carter, manager of the Grants Pass Irrigation district, that the water will be released from behind the Savage Rapids dam October 1. The warning was in the interest of safeguarding mining equipment.

Eugene—A tomato that started out to be two or maybe three but had a change of plan and grew to a circumference of 19 1/4 inches and a weight of 2 1/2 pounds, grown by Bert Holmes of Deadwood Ferry, has been on display at the office of the Eugene Register-Guard.

Albany—From now on, anyone refusing a job outside of federal relief projects will be denied FERA assistance, it has been resolved by the Linn county relief committee. This means, according to County Judge Woodworth, that "several hundred men who have turned down opportunities for steady employment will be forced to earn their living or starve."

Farmer Builds Sorghum Mill
Halsey—A number of the farmers of this vicinity are raising sorghum cane, and Estes Bass of this place has installed a mill to take care of the crop. It does well on the river bottom land near here.

Hen Thrives Without Gizzard
Cottage Grove—A freak hen that had no gizzard was killed a few days ago by W. C. Shortridge. How it digested its food was not apparent, but it had grown naturally and had been apparently in a healthy condition.

Cat Likes Fresh Corn
Portland—There's no keeping their Persian cat from the corn-patch, be it their own or a neighbor's, say Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Olson. The cat climbs cornstalks in pursuit of its tasseled prey, drags the ears downward and devours the juicy kernels.

Bulldogger Hurt by Steer
Enterprise—Chuck Roper, cowboy, was injured painfully while bulldogging a steer at the Wallowa county fair held here this week. The steer's horn entered at the front of Roper's neck and ripped out a goodly portion of the flesh, barely missing the jugular vein. He was taken to the hospital. Several stitches were taken in his neck.

SURVEY OF BIRTHS AND DEATHS BEING MADE.

Portland, Ore., Jan. 16 (Special)—A complete survey of birth and death registration, along with other phases of vital statistics work, will be made throughout Oregon in the next month, it was announced here today. This is an SERA project, with 42 workers assigned for the task to the State Board of Health by the State Emergency Relief Administration.

The 42 workers are field agents, and are to call on physicians, local vital statistics registrars, chiropractors, naturopaths, osteopaths and embalmers. One field agent is assigned to each of the 36 counties in the state, the other six workers being distributed among the counties of larger population.

"In this survey special attention will be paid to the completeness of statistics on births and deaths," said Dr. Frederick D. Stricker, secretary of the Board. "For this we already have a valuable foundation in the returns from our Register-Your-Baby campaign. Parents are still mailing cards in that campaign, and field agents in our survey will be looking out for instances in which fathers and mothers forgot to make reports on births of children."

In some counties it is expected that the survey will be completed in a few days, but in others, it is anticipated, the work will take a month.

"BACHELOR OF ARTS" HONEST COLLEGE FILM.

One motion picture with a college background whose authenticity scarcely can be challenged is Fox Film's "Bachelor of Arts," which plays at the Oasis theatre Sunday and Monday.

Its author is John Erskine, Columbia University's celebrated professor who has countless books to his credit, including "The Private Life of Helen of Troy," "Galahad," "Adam and Eve" and others.

The screen play was written by Lamar Trotty, who graduated from the University of Georgia with an

A. B. and a degree in journalism. The director, Louis King, is a former student of the University of Virginia.

The picture was filmed on the campus of Pomona College, California.

Nearly all of the "students" appearing in the production were actually Pomona College students.

The players in featured roles are all of average college age and include Anita Louise, Tom Brown, Arline Judge, Frank Albertson, Frank Melton and others.

In addition to all these "ear marks" of authenticity, "Bachelor of Arts" is said to be a really honest story of college life—with the humor out and the humor in. It is devoted to the thesis that all college life isn't one long rah-rah-rah.

Faced with real and mature problems, the young people of the film work them out in a human and believable manner, though always with a sense of humor.
