BANG'S DISEASE REACTORS ARE BEING APPRAISED

Regular testing on the Bang's disease control program started again today after a short delay due to shortage of supplies. Dr. R. R. Reeve said. During the interval appraisals were made of reactor cattle which has averaged ten per cent for all dairy cattle tested so far. The territory covered to date includes Umatilla, Columbia, North Hill and Fourth Unit.

Reports returned from the state college to date show 29 reactor herds, 33 clean herds with no reactors, and no returns from herds tested last week.

CHEAP MOLASSES READY FOR LIVESTOCK FEEDING.

Surplus molasses made from "over quota" cane in the sugar producing sections, will be available for stock feeding during the late winter months at prices that make it a good buy in some instances compared with grain. Drouth relief officials at Oregon State college have been notified from Washington.

The molasses would be imported from American possessions in some instances and then shipped to communities in tank cars. It is supposed to have a feeding value ten for ton about equal to corn. OSC livestock men say it can be used to advantage on low grade roughage such as straw or poor hay where better feeds are not available. Livestock owners desiring to obtain some of this molasses are advised to get in touch with the county drouth relief administrator, or in other counties with the agricultural agent, who will arrange shipments if enough demand develops.

CO-OPERATIVE GLEANINGS.

By E. H. DUNNING.

(Extracts from Gov't Bulletin 598)

"The average man who thinks of joining a cooperative thinks only of saving for himself the retailer's small net profit. He does not take due account of the fact that cooperative societies unite to form wholesales, and that these wholesales go into manufacturing and the production of raw materials, and that the great cooperative movement of the world is moving on to put into the pockets of the consumers that vast fund known as the 'profits of business.' This is known to be a very concrete fact in those countries where a large part of the people supply their needs through their cooperative societies."

"Discussion of political, religious, or other questions upon which the members of a cooperative may be divided should not be permitted; such discussions cause internal strife and may do much harm to the organization. Co-ops should be neutral in such matters."

"A cooperative should accumulate its surplus savings. In a non-cooperative this surplus goes to the private tradesman or investors as profit. In a cooperative this surplus cannot properly be called profits. It is the money that accumulates from the difference between the buying and distributing price of articles. The members, instead of buying at cost, advance the amount of this difference to the whole society to form a collective fund. It is essentially a loan."

"This collective surplus or savings is the essence of cooperative business. It is of extraordinary power and has produced most significant economic and social results. The use of this surplus marks the difference between the cooperative and the profit system of business."

The permanent reserve fund is an extra sum added to the capital to insure the future safety of the business. Usually from 5 to 25 per cent of the year's net savings must be added to the fund until the latter amounts to from 20 to 50 per cent of the paid in capital. Members should be encouraged to be generous to their reserve fund and the future security of their association and not be too anxious to divide among themselves at the end of the years every penny available.

The educational fund is also important, though the cost of educational work may be paid out of current operating expenses, in which case a special fund established out of surplus is not necessary. The important thing is that such work be done and adequately financed."

"A fundamental principle of co-operation is that goods should not be sold at cost or even at cost-plus. Nor should temporary under-selling of neighboring stores be advocated, except to meet unusual conditions. Cooperatives that fall into this error do not succeed in the end."

Notice to Members.

Members of the Farm Bureau Co-operative of Hermiston and Granges are asked to please check their membership standing at the office before Friday afternoon, in order to avoid embarrassment at the annual meeting Friday, during the voting session.

H. M. SOMMERER, Manager.

LADIES FARM AUXILIARY DISCUSS BUILDING PLANS.

At the regular business meeting of the Farm Bureau Auxiliary last Friday, plans were discussed for making an addition on the club house in Columbia park, which would accommodate other community enterprises and 4-H club meetings. Together with this business discussion the ladies completed tying a quilt.

The next regular meeting will be held Friday, February 15, at which Mrs. John Jendzrejewski, Mrs. Ed Dunning and Mrs. Clark will act as entertainment committee. Those serving on the regular committee last Friday included Mrs. Baxter Hutchison, Mrs. Henry Hooker and Mrs. Hughes.

DELINQUENT MEMBERS.

According to the by-laws governing the Co-operative Service Station, no patronage refund can be made to any member who has allowed his membership to become delinquent. Information as to the status of any membership is available at the main office of the Farm Bureau Co-operative.

Annual Meeting of the Hermiston Mercantile Co-operative.

The annual meeting of the Hermiston Mercantile Co-operative will be held Friday evening, February 15th, in the basement room of the Hermiston Public Library, at 8:00 P. M.

Election of directors, amendments to by-laws and other business will constitute the program for the evening. All members are urgently requested to be present.

ALFALFA HAY RATINGS ARE STUDIED IN FEEDING TEST.

Dairy cows that receive a grain supplement with alfalfa hay are around 7 per cent more efficient in changing feed into milk than cows restricted to alfalfa hay alone, according to results of hay feeding tests conducted by the dairy department of the Oregon Experiment station.

Cows under test were divided into three groups, one receiving ordinary second crop alfalfa hay, another the same grade of hay chopped, and the third, hay plus grain. Records on all of the cows were kept over a 395 day lactation period, and corrections were made for differences in ages of the animals.

With these corrections it was found that the average cow produced 1464 pounds of 4 per cent milk when fed long hay alone, 5778 pounds from chopped hay alone, and 8416 pounds when fed hay and grain.

It was concluded that it was economical to chop alfalfa hay at a cost of $2.25 per ton, regardless of the value of the hay, if butterfat sells for 30 cents a pound or above. It is not economical with butterfat selling below 20 cents a pound.

As to comparative profits in feeding hay alone or with grain, it was found that much depends on the relative prices of the product, hay and grain. If the price of grain is $20 a ton and alfalfa hay $10 a ton, which is approximately the price prevailing now in most alfalfa sections of the state, then it is economical to feed grain when butterfat is selling at 30 cent or more a pound.

Experiments are now in progress to get practical information on the most economical methods of supplementary feeding where dairy cattle are restricted largely to alfalfa hay. The most critical time for such feeding is in the first three or four months of the lactation period, as the entire cycle is influenced by the degree of feeding done in this early period.

RAPID WORK IN CORN-HOG CAMPAIGN PLANNED BY O.S.C.

With district meetings of corn-hog committeemen and county agents being held this week, and individual county meetings scheduled to start the first week in February, the 1935 program is now underway throughout Oregon with those in charge hoping it can be wound up in six weeks.

At a conference in Portland between Ralph Moyer, regional representative of the corn-hog section, and officials of the extension service, arrangements were made for the state college men to take charge of the educational and sign-up campaign, as in the past, Charley Smith, emergency county agent supervisor, has been named to head the educational campaign. Harry Lindgren, livestock extension specialist who headed the campaign last year, is still on special duty with the drouth relief organizations.

The series of five regional meetings being conducted this week at Portland, Arlington, La Grande, Corvallis and Medford are for discussion of the new contract provisions and procedure with the allotment committeemen and other county association officials, together with the county agents. These will be followed by county meetings for community committeemen alone in the large counties, while in counties with 150 or fewer contracts, a single day will be devoted to the community committeemen's meetings and the growers themselves.

Procedure will be much simpler this year, according to Mr. Smith, as those who took part in last year's program have their hog base already established. For such a grower it will be largely a case of hearing the detailed provisions of the new contract, figuring out how they apply to him, and deciding whether or not to join in the program again. Growers who did not join in the 1934 program may set contracts under the new plan by producing the necessary evidence to establish a base.

The corn-hog review board for Oregon will consist this year of N. E. Dodd, Baker farmer, representing the corn-hog section; C. J. Borum, newly appointed federal statistician at Portland; and a representative of the state college staff. Mr. Dodd is to be largely responsible for handling new contract evidence and Mr. Borum will handle the detailed statistical work through his office.

Agents Now Making Lime Tests.

CORVALLIS—Every county agent in western Oregon is now equipped to make soil tests for acidity and for phosphorus, according to A. L. King, extension specialist in soils at Oregon State college. These tests can be made in a few minutes, and save farmers who use them a great deal of money by preventing them from attempting to grow crops such as alfalfa on acid soils, liming soils that do not require it, and by showing them whether or not their soil would respond to an application of phosphate fertilizer.

OREGON LEADS WEST WITH DETAILED SOIL SURVEYS.

Oregon leads all other western states in detailed soil surveys and invoices of soil resources, reports Dr. W. L. Powers, chief of soils at Oregon State college, following a conference with Dr. J. G. Lippman, director of the agricultural experiment station in New Jersey, who is now in the west in the interests of the National Resources board. One representative from each of the western states attended the conference at Berkeley called by Dr. Lippman.

The work in Oregon has recently received impetus through the granting of an SERA project for tabulating and summarizing the data already gathered and making additional chemical analysis. Dr. Lippman reports that the basic task of classifying the soil resources of the country will probably be continued until completed.
