SAFeway CELEBRATES 20TH BIRTHDAY THIS WEEK.

Twenty years ago in American Falls, Idaho, Safeway Stores came into being the outgrowth of an idea that foods could be distributed to consumers at a much lesser cost in overhead. The wasteful expense methods in vogue at that time (1915) in retailing foodstuffs had become a definite burden to consumers and at the same time not enough was being returned to the producer that were rightfully his share. With the idea in mind of correcting this wastefulness between the producer and the consumer, the first Safeway Store came into being—in fact the first store took the shape of a box-car on the siding, farmers coming for miles around to enjoy the "Sale." This drastic cutting out of waste in distribution earned Safeway the right to their logan, "Distribution Without Waste" which it has blazoned on its banners and in its advertisements for the past 20 years. Safeway was founded on the principle of fairness: fairness to its customers, fairness to the producer, fairness to its employees. Penalizing the producer in order to give a "bargain" to the consumer has never been the policy of Safeway operators as has been attested again and again in Safeway's Producer-Consumer Campaigns to relieve over-production of crops. As to fairness to employees, Safeway Stores have always maintained that a satisfied employee is its best asset and have always paid a wage scale higher than the average in similar lines of endeavor and have rewarded faithful service with promotion—in fact with the exception of a very few, all executives of the company have come right up the ranks from store clerk.
