Football
The football season is worry time for most parents. Perhaps most of our fears are groundless, particularly in the case of the senior high school boy. But for the younger boy in the grades and junior high school, football becomes a hazard.

Most leaders in athletics and physical education believe that the boy should not play the real game until he is in the senior school. And then only when he is in the best condition as shown by a physician's examination. Every candidate for any school athletic team should be thoroughly examined before being allowed to join the squad.

As a part of the examination some schools are demanding a tuberculin test and an X-ray of the chest. This practice will become general in time for all students. To the parent of a player, the football season is the ideal time to put the health rules into practice. At this time, the boy will do anything under the guise of training.

The coach and the trainer have a real educational opportunity. Let football be the vehicle for valuable lessons in nutrition, the correct diet, the value of milk, sleep, bathing, and the like. The boy will feel the good effects, so utilize his interest in an effort to have him carry over the health practices when the season is ended.

Dr. Ireland will discuss food essentials for the school child in his next series.
