

HIGH SCHOOL BOARD CONTEMPLATES BOND ISSUE ELECTION

FINAL DECISION EXPECTED AT MEETING MONDAY.

45 Per Cent Free Grant from PWA Funds Encouraging in $100,000 Saving.

Whether the new 45 per cent free grant of PWA funds offered by the president justifies the authorization of a bond issue election for a new high school building, will be decided at the regular board meeting of school district No. 9, Monday, June 10, held in the Hermiston high school.

The information secured by A. D. Smith, president of the board, while in Portland last week will be presented at this meeting. Mr. Smith contacted the director of state PWA funds, and architects who have made illustrated drawings of the proposed high school building.

The cost of the building complete, Mr. Smith said, "will not be much over $70,000, but the government will give us a free grant of 45 per cent on most items, if we get the money under the PWA set-up. We will have 40 years in which to pay the money, with interest at 3 per cent. Unless the plans are changed this will include a central heating plant to heat both the old and new building. This will give us approximately $1375 principal and $1650 interest annually at the beginning with a decrease in interest. We have been paying approximately $1600 annually for the use of the present school building, theatre and auditorium, and I presume we will get an annual payment from district No. 14 for heating its building. Our last year for applying on our indebtedness was approximately $5000. It would seem that the necessary levy will be less than it was last year."

It has also been pointed out that it will cost the Union high school district over $100,000 more to build, pay interest and pay off the bonds if construction is done under the regular old order.

R. A. Brownson, clerk, says that the district is free of debt at this time.

A fine illustrated drawing of the proposed high school building, furnished by architect Tourtelotte & Hummill of Portland, has been on display in the Herald office window this week, creating much interest and attention. The same illustration with description and dimensions of the building appears elsewhere on this page.

The public is invited to attend the school board meeting Monday when the final decision is expected to be made.
