Three kinds of entertainment—radio, night club and musical comedy—highlight the plot of RKO Radio's "Hooray for Love," which will be at the Oasis theatre Friday and Saturday.

In her role of a musical comedy favorite, Ann Southern broadcasts at a metropolitan radio station, stages a spectacular number in a smart club and sings her way to fame in a Broadway show.

In his role of a young college man with an ambition to become a theatrical producer, Gene Raymond presents a four-act revue which includes a beautiful ballet, a hilarious black and tan number and double piano act. A chorus of beautiful girls is used in the "Hooray for Love" finale.

Pert Kelton, comedienne, returns to the screen after several months of vaudeville, and is seen in a part particularly fitted to her inimitable style. She also sings on the screen for the first time.
