Garden Displays.
A number of new prizes are offered for garden displays and the fair board states that the response is good so far. One of the best displays of such products in years is expected. More gardens have been grown than usual and the results have been good. The interest in these products and the canning will be demonstrated more than in the past.

EDGAR WALLACE STORY NOW ON OASIS SCREEN

"Sanders of the River," Alexander Korda's production of the famous Edgar Wallace story of the Congo is brought to the screen of the Oasis theatre this Friday and Saturday.

The story, which Lajos Biro and Jeffrey Dell adapted to the screen, follows the thrilling adventures of the miracle-working British District Commissioner Sanders, who by his personal courage and deep understanding of the native mind and heart maintains peace among the savage Congo tribes under his charge.

Paul Robeson is seen as Bosambo, a big, handsome, intelligent and lovable Negro whom Sanders makes chief on probation. Banks has the title role, and Nina Mae McKinney is seen as the beautiful slave girl, Lilongo, whom Boseabo makes his bride.

A new type of cabbage developed at Cornell University is said to be non-smelling, and also a little more easily digested than other varieties.
