Ready for Winter.

As the leaves of poplar and locust turn yellow and the Virginia creeper takes on sunset fire; as the tassels of the corn creep downward toward the ripened yellow of the grain; as the mellowing green and golden leaves of the vine; as the potato tops lie brown on the hill; when the prince of game birds airs his new plumage; and, when the dairy cows loom from the falling pastures toward the stacks of hay at the barn, then we know that fall is well along.

A Sunday drive will show you how well nature has done her part and how well man's industry has been rewarded during the growing seasons nearing a close. Alfalfa hay, corn, well filled silos, vegetable gardens, beautiful dairy herds, great flocks of snow white hens and bronze turkeys, pigs and sheep, show large production on every homestead. And we know that the cellars and basements are well stocked with canned fruits, jellies, vegetables, fish and meats of many varieties. Let the tang of late October air inspire you to a visit down Boardman, Irrigon, Umatilla ways, and then over to Stanfield, Echo and the Umatilla meadows, Westland, and round about the Hermiston project, and you will see how well the coming winter needs are provided for in all these things that make good living.

If all the spots in this broad land were as fortunate as our own, then relief would be only for the helpless and indigent, and prosperity would sweep the country. There is a Thanksgiving day just ahead, when our hearts should be filled with thankfulness to the Creator for such bounty.

TRUCKS AT 50 PER.

OREGON JOURNAL—Sept. 27, 1935

Last Saturday morning a truck about as big as a house came down the Island hill on the East Side super-highway into the town of Milwaukie, running 50 miles an hour.

At that speed it went through the town and toward Portland on the continuance of the new highway that the city council named in honor of Dr. John McLoughlin.

And on the new highway, within the Portland city limits, there were three monster trucks, none traveling less than 45 miles an hour. One of them was carrying a tall and big load of bundled shingles. One of the bundles had been blown loose by the rush of the truck through the air. Shingles were flying back almost with force enough to break a windshield of a following car.

Even when the big trucks reached Southeast 17th Avenue and cars were many, both those bound eastward or westward and those parked at the curb, no truck traveled at a speed less than 30 miles an hour.

Great advances have been made in the speed of commercial carriers. The drivers have found it out. They are driving enormous trucks at breakneck speed, on highways and streets. How long it will be until they break necks, their own and those of others, remains to be seen. But, unfortunately, traffic control is hardly ever provided until tragedy enforces official duty.

O.S.C. Enrollment Still Growing.

CORVALLIS—Registration at Oregon State college this fall exceeded expectations when late enrollment, mostly graduate students, carried the full-time total to 3106 at the end of the second week of the term.

This is more than 500 ahead of last year's first term registration, a gain of 21 per cent. The largest gain for any one school is a 76 per cent increase shown by agriculture. This is explained partly by the better economic conditions in agriculture and better opportunities for specialized employment in related fields, says Dean Wm. A. Schoenfeld. Another factor this year has been a heavy enrollment in the new course in wild life conservation work established by the school of agriculture in cooperation with state and federal agencies.

LOANS

BASED ON FAIR DEALING TO ALL.

The borrower who feels that his loan should be renewed and renewed is unwittingly blocking normal financial traffic. Bank credit is created for the use of the community, not just a fortunate few. Unless loans are generally repaid when due, the flow of credit into new, deserving channels will obviously be limited.

This bank endeavors to apply its loan policy with fairness to all—the local business interests it serves, to its depositors whose funds it must protect, to its directors who are responsible for wise management, and to its stockholders whose money has made it possible for this institution to render financial service to the community.
