EYES OF THE WORLD

REPORTER-PHOTOGRAPHERS, hundreds of them, constantly scour the world for "shots" that will make a news highlight more real . . . more interesting . . . more understandable. The single, business-like click of a camera and a thousand-word story is captured, all in an instant, to be presented in a manner more graphic than the words themselves could ever attain.

The scenes these men photograph number into the thousands daily. From this great number a careful selection is made. The chosen pictures, designed to aid you in the visualization of important news events or "human-interest" occurrences and individuals, are regularly offered by this newspaper.

This is our answer to a modern public's demand upon a modern newspaper for pictures of places, persons and incidents of world-wide interest.

RURAL RELIEF CASES ON SMALL, LOW-VALUE FARMS.

The portion of rural families in Oregon on relief who had the best facilities for becoming self supporting with special help, still fell below in total facilities the average part-time farmer in the state, according to a report of a special survey just published at Oregon State college.

The report tabulates the results of a study made of 1014 cases that had applied for rural rehabilitation, which was carried out as an FERA research project under the direction of C. S. Hoffman, assistant and L. R. Brethaupt, supervisor of rural research.

The 1014 cases studied were selected out of some 6000 rural relief cases in Oregon. The average total value of the farms included in this group was only $1200, compared with an average value of $2,142 for the part-time farms recently surveyed, and an average valuation of close to $7000 for all farms in the state.

The average acreage of places included in the study was only 35.2 acres, of which only 12 acres were in crops, 19 acres in pasture, and 4.2 acres waste land. Stock, tools and equipment were generally meager, the average inventory of live-stock being $113.04, equipment and tools $58.27, and feed and seed $25.12.

Average liabilities against the farms was $673.78, so that the net worth was only $539.06, this figure having fallen from $852 since the properties were acquired. An educational study of the operators shows about 79 per cent had finished grade school, 16.4 per cent had finished high school and less than five per cent having had any more advanced training.

Spearman's Novel Brought Opening For Screen Star

Frank H. Spearman, author of "Gunlock Ranch," this paper's new serial, is credited with giving the late Wallace Reid his start as a motion picture actor. While in his heyday shortly before death overtook him, Reid said he "rode into fame on the screen with a play by Frank H. Spearman."

In his latest novel, "Gunlock Ranch," the famous Western author has returned to the field of his first literary conquest to gain new recognition as an old-time writer who could "come back." Spearman was born in Buffalo, N. Y., and spent his boyhood in Wisconsin. Orphaned when fifteen years of age, he was forced to leave Lawrence college at Appleton, Wis., and go to work as a salesman for his brother in Chicago, a wholesale grocer.

Spearman was married to Miss Eugenie Longergan, daughter of the late Thomas Longergan, pioneer Chicagoan. Delicate in health, he went to McCook, Neb., where he started writing while regaining his health. Since that time he has lived in Chicago and Hollywood, producing many notable stories.

Spearman's railroad short stories occupy a niche of their own in American fiction. Two of them, "Held for Orders" and "The Nerve of Foley," are still in print. "Whispering Smith" is one of his most famous novels, while his outstanding Western books are "Nan of Music Mountain," "Laramie Holds the Range," "Selwood of Sleepy Cat" and "Flambeau Jim." The author has four sons, three of whom are married. The other is a newly ordained Jesuit priest.
