Stanfield Grange News.

Stanfield Grange No. 657 held its regular meeting August 25, with Overseer Joseph Meyer acting in the master's chair.

FARM LADIES ATTEND AUXILIARY MEETING FRIDAY

Ladies of the Farm Bureau Auxiliary met Friday, August 21, at the Union church with Mrs. J. H. Ryland and Mrs. P. H. Corman acting as hostesses.

A kitchen shower was given August 13 in Columbia park for a neighbor who had lost their home by fire.

The next meeting will be held Friday, September 4, in the Union church with Mesdames C. A. Lynch, Jess Prindle, N. W. Bloom and White acting on the committee.

DAIRYMEN HEAR WESTERN GUERNSEY FIELD MAN SPEAK

C. W. Robinson, western field man for the American Guernsey Cattle club, spoke before a group of dairymen Monday night at the Union church.

Mr. Robinson showed pictures of the Byrd exposition to the south pole on which three Guernsey cows were taken to furnish milk and cream for the men.

The film showing dairy herds in California was also shown. Herds are handled differently here due to the fact that pasture is high and there is more feeding of weeds than pasturing.

LOCAL CLUBBERS ATTEND PENDLETON RAM SALE

A large number of 4-H clubbers from this district attended the club day at the ram sale in Pendleton last Friday than all those combined from other sections of the county.

During the day there were demonstrations in judging given by club members, and breeders discussed the ideal types and particular breeds which are included in their flocks.

Those going from here included Frank and Roberta Benschel, Joe Cooney, Richard Rug, Robert Haley, Ralph Haley, Henry Sommerer, Jr., Mary Sommerer, Clemma Barber, Otha Whitsett, Lois Hutchison, Arilda Foster, Jim Jackson, Bill Corpe, Darrell Seeliger, Chas. Kik, Gale Martin, Eldon Saylor, Kenneth Benschel, Aulida Bleakney, Neil Bleakney, Marie Olsen, Harry Lewis, Lois Hunt, Irene Hunt, and W. R. Barber, one of the club leaders.

LIVESTOCK SHIPPING ORGANIZATION UNDER WAY.

Formation of a livestock shipping association is well under way at Hermiston, and committees from the various granges, and the Umatilla Project Farm Bureau will meet in a few days to lay plans for a permanent organization.

Lyle Tilden, who will probably handle the assembling and shipping of the stock, was in Portland several days last week where he visited the stock yards and secured valuable information regarding disposing of the stock.

The need of a livestock shipping association has long been apparent to the farmers of this end of the county, and news of such an organization being formed will be welcome to all.

CO-OP GLEANINGS

By E. H. Dunning.

Stripped of all side issues and secondary causes, the economic problem boils down to the one word "exploitation." Exploitation means taking more than is given in return.

In 1929, according to the Brookings Institution, 36,000 families at the top of the economic scale in the United States received as much income as 11,500,000 families at the bottom of the economic scale.

Co-operation goes right to the root of this matter of exploitation. So far as business of any kind is done co-operatively, the profits—which represent something taken without giving anything in return, and are, therefore, unearned—are returned to the patrons.

The farther co-operation is carried in lines it is now established, and the greater the number of lines in which it is established, the more effective it will be in stopping exploitation.

WALLA WALLA, Wn.—Pacific Supply Cooperative has just come through the most drastic price war in its short history. Efforts of private profit companies to close up the co-ops by price competition were unsuccessful.

LOW-HEAT PRE-COOKING SETS GREEN COLOR IN VEGETABLES.

Home-makers who can green vegetables are often disappointed to find that the canned product has not its fresh natural green color and taken on a faded and somewhat brownish hue.

This loss of color in such vegetables as new peas and green beans, spinach and others is due to the high temperature necessary in canning. Miss Lucy Case, extension specialist in foods and nutrition at Oregon State college, explains. Chlorophyll, the green substance in plants, is sensitive to acid during cooking, she points out, and most vegetables contain some acid which the heat of cooking or canning drives out.

Recent investigations have shown that if the green vegetable is pre-cooked at low temperatures, between 160 to 180 degrees, the color seems to "set" so that when the vegetable is put in the can and exposed to the high heat of processing, it will not fade so badly.

The new way, then, is first to cook green vegetables a short time in a saucepan with water, keeping the temperature at or below simmering point, Miss Case says. Then put the hot vegetable immediately into sterilized hot containers and process under steam pressure.

Juices suitable for jelly making are definitely acid in flavor. If acid seems lacking, a good precaution is to add 1 tablespoon of strained lemon juice to each standard measuring cup of fruit juice, say home economics specialists at O.S.C. This facilitates jellifying to some extent and adds to flavor.

FAMILY LIVING CONFERENCE PENDLETON, SEPTEMBER 1ST.

"Our Family Talks It Over" will be the theme of the discussions by Mrs. Maude Morse, Extension Specialist in Parent Education and Child Development, of Oregon State college, at the Family Living conference to be held in the First Presbyterian church in Pendleton, September 1, from 10 to 3 o'clock.

The family living conference is a part of the regular program in home economics extension and is arranged by Miss Frances Clinton, Home Demonstration Agent, assisted by the County Home Extension Committee of Umatilla County Home Makers.

"The conference is for everyone. You do not have to be a parent to attend," says Miss Clinton. "Any individual who lives with people or anyone interested in knowing why we act as we do and what are some of the ways of human behavior will profit by the discussion."

Aims of the conference are to help people think for themselves; to learn to talk things over; to make people understand why they feel and act as they do; to share the findings of modern research; and to attempt to find the causes of your problems.

Special music and a question box will be part of the conference. Exhibits of new books for children and adults and home made children's toys will be displayed.

Each one is asked to bring their own lunch of sandwiches, cookies and fruit for salad. Coffee and salad will be prepared at the church. A day nursery will be open for the children whose parents attend the conference.

RURAL RELIEF FAMILIES MOVE AROUND FREQUENTLY.

Approximately one-fifth of the families in Oregon on what the federal government classes as "rural relief" came into this state since 1930, and less than one-sixth of the cases were engaged in definite agricultural pursuits.

This latest report is contained in a circular of information entitled "Mobility and Migration of Rural Relief Households in Six Oregon Counties." Most of those who came into the state and subsequently went on relief were from the Rocky Mountain and western states.

The average size of these migration families was just a fraction under four persons, which approaches closely the average size family in the general population but is smaller than the average of all relief families.

The report shows that one-half of the families studied had settled in the open country, 34 per cent in villages of from 50 to 2500 population and 16 per cent in towns of from 2500 to 5000 population—the divisions recognized in the federal classification.

Only 15 per cent of the heads of the rural relief families studied were engaged in agriculture, the report shows. Sixty-four per cent were engaged in non-agricultural occupations while 21 per cent could not be classed as engaged in any occupation. A very small number of rural relief families were actually operating farms.

The information was prepared from a study of 50 per cent of all rural relief cases in Baker, Clatsop, Crook, Josephine, Polk and Morrow counties. The complete study, of which this is only a partial report, was carried on at the request of the relief administration as a means of developing a large amount of basic information dealing with the entire relief problem.

MILLION CUBIC YARDS CONCRETE POURED IN DAM

The first million cubic yards of concrete has been placed in Grand Coulee dam, under construction on the Columbia river in eastern Washington, the Bureau of Reclamation reported to Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes.

The one million yard was placed without ceremony last night. Pouring of concrete began December 6, and to reach the millionth yard today an average of nearly 4,000 cubic yards a day has been maintained.

The record pour made in one day to date has been more than 7,100 cubic yards of concrete. Only one mixing plant, that on the west side of the river, has been in operation up to this time. However, the east mix plant is about ready to begin.

Using More Irrigated Pasture.

CORVALLIS—Benton county farmers are becoming more and more "irrigation minded," especially in the matter of pasture projects, reports County Agent W. S. Averill. Several fairly large projects are being installed this year, he says, most of which will be seeded to Ladino clover to be used primarily for dairy and sheep pasture.

WHEN A WOMAN HAS THE last word

No matter what we say about it, the woman who buys a Maytag always has the last word. Maytag can prove its finer construction and performance by comparison and record, but what the Maytag owner says to her neighbor is the greatest influence in Maytag sales.

There are more Maytags in use than any other washer, so ask your neighbor who owns a Maytag—then come in and see the latest one-piece, cast-aluminum tub Maytag—with the original Gyrotator washing action, Roller Water Remover, sediment trap and numerous other advantages. Spread the cost over many weekly or monthly payments.
