WESTLAND GRANGE HOST TO VISITING GRANGE MEMBERS

Monday night at the regular session of the Westland Grange, Claude Hanscom, Umatilla County Deputy, and Mrs. Hanscom, of the Cold Springs Grange, and J. M. Richards of the Stanfield Grange, were present.

Two applications for membership were presented. A program opened by group singing led by A. E. Bensen. This was followed by instrumental music, readings and educational subjects discussed.

Plans for a Grange booster night program to take place September 30th, were made. This will be an open meeting and everyone is cordially invited to come and get acquainted with the Grange policies. Mrs. Mildred Crow, State Grange Flora, will be present from White Eagle to assist with the program.

Plans were also started for entertainment of Pomona here on November 5th. Refreshments were served by the Home Economics club.

WESTLAND GRANGE HOME ECONOMICS CLUB MEETS

The Home Economics club of the Westland Grange met Wednesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. A. E. Bensen, on Butter Creek. Plans were made for a bazaar to be held in the near future, and also entertainment of the Umatilla County Pomona Grange which will meet here November 5th.

Mrs. Bensen served delicious refreshments and a pleasant afternoon was spent.

The next meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Floyd Laird September 23rd.

THE GRANGE TOUCHES HEART OF COMMUNITY LIFE.

The Grange combines actual service of agriculture through its cooperative and legislative activities, with the social and neighborly efforts which touch the very heart of community life.

The basic element of Grange strength is the fact that it is the one fraternity in America of the farmer, by the farmer and for the farmer.

About every normal person longs to be of value in the world, but it is uphill work doing it alone. Team work is the answer and the Grange shows the farmer how it is done. An old saying "Every banana when taken away from the bunch immediately gets skinned" is an illustration of the plight of farmers. Safety lies in sticking together. The future prosperity of agriculture depends upon the capacity of its workers to sink personal differences and pull together. The Grange, as a leader toward these two great ends, has no equal.

Legislation can do many things for the farmer's welfare, but he can do a lot more for himself, when effectively linked up with his fellows in a well balanced organization.

Eight hundred thousand alert rural people holding six hundred meetings every night of the year can't be wrong. They all belong to the Grange and labor for its extension. And notwithstanding its tremendous service, the cost of Grange membership is very low. Easily within the reach of farm families everywhere. —Blue Mountain Eagle.

GLENWOOD, MINN.—Five thousand enthusiastic cooperators gathered on the shores of Lake Minnawaska July 4th to celebrate the Fifteenth Anniversary of the first gas and oil cooperative in the United States and the fourteenth annual International Cooperative Day. Four representatives from cooperatives in Puerto Rico and Robert McKay, Saskatoon, and W. F. Popple, Winnipeg, vice presidents of the Cooperative Union of Canada, took part with cooperative leaders from every section of the United States in rededicating the movement to International cooperation.

Members of the original board of directors of the Cottonwood cooperative described scenes from its founding fifteen years ago. Other speakers told how, spreading fan-like from Cottonwood, 2000 retail gas and oil cooperatives have created a $40,000,000 cooperative industry.

CO-OPERATION

Much has been said about cooperation and it is interesting the motive that prompted the first successful cooperative enterprise. It traces back to Europe, where poverty resulting from unemployment which accompanied the industrial revolution at the time of the introduction of machinery, made its earliest inroads upon labor.

On October 24, 1844, in Rochdale, England, 28 weavers who had been working intermittently in the mills at Rochdale for $1.50 a week, decided to pool their resources and by operating their own store save the profits that went to the store keeper. After a year of greatest privation 28 of them accumulated $140 to begin their enterprise. The first year's business showed the capital had grown to $900 and its membership had grown to 80. It was called the Rochdale Society of Equitable Pioneers.

Three of the principles that governed the movement were:

1. Each member shall have one vote and no more, regardless of the number of shares he holds.
2. Capital invested in the society if it received interest, shall receive not more than a fixed percentage which shall be not more than the minimum prevailing rate.
3. If a surplus saving (profit) accrues by virtue of the difference between the net cost and the net selling price of commodities and service, after meeting expenses, paying interest and setting aside a reserve and other funds, the net surplus saving shall be used for the good of the members, for a beneficent social purpose, or shall be returned to the patrons as savings—returns in proportion to each member's patronage.

This society progressed and by 1854 its members erected their own spinning mill. Other groups of workers inspired by the Rochdale progress also set up like societies. It was three years after the Rochdale experiment got under way in England that the first significant step was taken in the United States toward the establishing of consumers' cooperatives in industrial centers. In 1847 the New England Protective Union was formed to organize cooperative stores throughout the United States. This union made headway with 106 stores to its credit by 1850 and 462 by 1852.

A good example of a successful American consumers' cooperative is the Umatilla County Cooperative Society in Minnesota. It was established in 1924 after the town of Cloquet was virtually destroyed by fire. The society now operates a main store with two floors, three branch stores serving the surrounding countryside, and has a modern service station and garage, a coal yard, an automobile agency and a feed warehouse.

Cloquet is a town of 7,000. The membership of this society is more than 2,000 and in 1934 reported a business of $50,000. The society employs about 50 persons with a monthly payroll of more than $4,000 and maintains a fleet of six trucks to serve outlying districts. It sets the price standard for its chain store competitors, and has forced the withdrawal of two chains from the town by consistently operating at a lower margin. The Cloquet society maintains educational and recreational facilities for its members. An auditorium seating 500 people, a gymnasium, a cafeteria and a library are among the advantages provided for Cloquet cooperators.

In Kansas City, Mo., the Consumers' Cooperative Association bought a $250,000 plant at a bankrupt sale six years ago. It has found it necessary to expand five times since that purchase. Cooperatives are responsive to regional characteristics and arise from the regional need of a group or community.

In rural sections of the middle west where motorized farming is carried on to an intensive degree, gasoline and oil cooperatives do a flourishing business. They expand and handle tires, insurance, paint, and finally groceries, general merchandise and even electricity.

There is no limit to the possibility of cooperation. Let us talk and discuss it so when we do expand we will all be familiar with what can be done.

OREGON HONEY CROP NORMAL.

CORVALLIS — Information from various sources indicate that the 1936 crop of Oregon honey is about normal in most sections, says H. A. Stullen, associate professor of entomology at O. S. C., while eastern states report honey crops far below normal in most sections.

SPONSORS OF STATE BANK CONFIDENT IT WILL PASS.

A giant state bank with guaranteed deposits running into millions upon millions of dollars is contemplated in the so-called state bank bill which will appear on the ballot at the November general election.

Unlike a private bank, this state financial institution will automatically open its doors with millions in deposits in its vaults.

Provision is made to begin with that it shall be the depository of the funds of all state departments and institutions which in themselves run into millions.

Then for good measure provision is made that the institutions shall also be the depository of the funds of all counties, cities and districts aggregating millions.

All these funds are now on deposit with the various private banks of the state.

As soon as the bank opens it is authorized to engage in a general bank business.

Besides the state and its various political subdivisions it may receive deposits from all sources—governmental—both foreign and domestic—corporations and individuals.

Preference Loans.

It may do a general loan business, but must give preference:

- First — To the state.
- Second — To the counties.
- Third — To the cities and districts.
- Fourth — To non-profit corporations or associations.
- Fifth — To individuals.
- Sixth — To corporations or associations for profit.

Loans to the state, counties, cities and districts can not exceed the constitutional limitations and loans to individuals are limited to $15,000.

Loans on real property shall not exceed 50 per cent of the appraised value of the land and 20 per cent of the permanent insured improvements.

All loans must be made in conformity with the state banking laws—the same as private banks.

The bank is to be called the Bank of Oregon and its affairs are to be administered by a board of directors composed of:

- The governor.
- The secretary of state.
- The state treasurer.
- The labor commissioner.
- The attorney general.
- The state treasurer, who is now custodian of all state funds and securities, is to serve as chairman of the board.

Confident of Enactment.

All members of the board are to serve without compensation other than that received as a state official.

The board is to name a bank manager who shall hold the position subject to its pleasure.

The board may establish agent banks in counties when such a course is deemed advisable.

The act creating the state bank was initiated by the Oregon State Grange and the Oregon State Federation of Labor.

It was one of the few measures that carried more than enough signatures to place it on the ballot.

Both these organizations will sponsor the act during the general election campaign.

Leaders of both are confident of its enactment by the people.—Henry M. Hazen in Portland Bulletin.

IRRIGON NEWS

(Too late for last week)

Mr. and Mrs. Russell McCoy, Mrs. Earl Isom and Mrs. J. A. Graybeal motored to Pendleton Thursday to do some shopping.
