CO-P INTEREST AT "WHITE HEAT"

(Co-op League News Service)
Chicago, Ill.—Three hundred delegates and members of cooperatives in the Chicago area meeting in Waukegan, May 1 and 2, for the 11th Annual Congress of the Central States Cooperative League, found the interest in the cooperative movement at "white heat". The delegates represented 60 cooperative associations as contrasted with 38 member co-ops in 1936 and 13 when the League was organized in 1927.

Methods of cooperative education and organization and immediate problems of distribution were major considerations of the congress. A special commission was appointed to study the relation of the League to cooperative federations which have been formed to carry on intensive educational work in smaller areas within the territory of the League.

The Cooperative Wholesale, organized by the League a year ago, reported at its first annual meeting the following day that 43 retail cooperatives have affiliated with it. During its year of operation the business of the wholesale has grown so large that it was necessary to open a new warehouse. Although still in its organizational stage, the wholesale showed a net saving of 2.6 per cent for the year. Starting with 32 items, the co-op has extended its operations and now handles 264 commodities, many of them under the Co-op label.

The delegates to the wholesale voted that the organization use such agencies as the U.S. Bureau of Standards and Consumers Union for grading and obtaining specifications on merchandise which it handles.

SUFFICIENT WATER STORED IN WEST

The measurements of water stored in the Federal reservoirs at the beginning of May disclosed that what-over droughts or water shortages other lands may have, a good year generally can be expected in 1937 on areas that are the government's reclamation projects in the West.

Securely held in vast reservoirs in anticipation of the hot, dry months is enough water to cover the state of South Carolina a foot deep or Indiana 10 inches. This will provide a supply of essential water to a total reclamation area of 3,000,000 acres, approximately the equivalent of the state of Connecticut.

A total of 19,626,017 acre-feet of water, 7,285,554 more than was impounded on April 30, last year, had been stored by May 1, 1937.

"Prospects are bright for the reclamation projects," John C. Page, Commissioner of Reclamation, reported to Secretary of Interior Harold L. Ickes. "With the increase in storage expected during May and June, all projects with the exception of two will be provided with ample water for the coming irrigation season."

"The two which will suffer some shortage are the Belle Fourche project in South Dakota and the North Platte project in Wyoming and Nebraska, and the latter is in a much better position this year than it was at this date last year."

CHESTER WHITE HOGS JUDGED

At a meeting of the Progressive Dairy Calf club held at the home of Robert Bensei Saturday afternoon at 1:00 o'clock, June 5, an unusual happening took place. A class of five Chester White hogs were judged under the supervision of the local leader, A. E. Rugg.

Two members, who were chosen to participate in the three judging teams which will compete at the Eastern Oregon Livestock Show at Union, June 10, 11 and 12, were given pointers in judging pigs to bolster up their chance in judging other than dairy cattle. Eugene Rugg is a member of the Beef Club judging team and Robert Bensei is a representative of the Pig club judging team. Eugene Rugg took a dairy calf and his beef calf to the Union show. Joe Cooney took a dairy calf. Others present at the meeting were Frank Bensei, secretary of the club, and James Rugg.

The general dairy topic discussed was the care of the calf from birth until it develops into a heifer. Other specific problems were also discussed. Joe Cooney gave a demonstration on how a calf should be taught to drink. The club as a group discussed the different kinds of feeds available in this area for calves, and the most economical rations to feed.

The next regular meeting of the club will be held June 26th at the home of Joe Cooney.

Cherry Crop Destroyed.

G. T. McNealey of Patterson, Wn., was here yesterday and states that a few days before the storm Monday his cherry crop was estimated at 20 to 25 tons. After the storm not over two tons can be harvested and 25 large trees were blown down. The large orchard near the Patterson station was greatly damaged. Mr. McNealey said that the next day he visited the Yakima valley near Grandview and the cherries were practically all on the ground. Apricots, peaches, pears and apples were damaged 50 per cent or more. He would have received ten cents a pound for his cherries or over $4000 which was gone with the wind.

CARE OF HENS BIG ITEM IN PROFITS

Feeding, Housing, Management Are Important.

By G. M. Ferguson, Poultry Specialist, Ohio State University.—WNU Service.

Poultry production cost records prove that you cannot turn a flock of hens out in the backyard and then rapidly become rich by gathering eggs for sale.

Buildings and equipment owned by the 116 Ohio poultrymen, who kept cost accounts in 1935, involved an investment of more than $1,100 per flock or $3.18 per bird. The records were kept by owners of large flocks who were experienced poultrymen and who have more than average ability in managing the flocks.

Two of the flocks lost money for their owners during 1935, 42 earned a labor income of from 1 cent to $1 per hen, 36 made a labor income of from $1 to $2 per hen, and seven flocks paid a labor income of more than $2 per hen. It is apparent that there is a variation in returns from poultry even when managed by competent poultrymen.

The greatest single factor in influencing the returns from these Ohio flocks was the average egg production per hen. The flocks which returned the greatest profits produced an average of 180 eggs per bird per year. The least profitable flocks averaged 124 eggs per hen.

The ability of hens to lay eggs is largely a matter of inheritance, but feeding, housing, and management practices also affect the rate of egg production. The selection of chicks from flocks with good production records is the only method of securing pullets with inherited ability for high egg production but even the good pullets cannot produce at their maximum rate unless they are well fed.

Feed represents about 60 per cent of the total cost of producing a dozen eggs so the poultryman who is to make a profit on his flock must watch feed prices closely and be ready to substitute a lower priced feed for a costly one whenever possible.

Make Rat Control Part of Poultry Farm Routine

Even one rat is an expensive liability on a poultry farm, for besides committing wholesale murder among the chicks it will consume as much as 60 pounds of feed a year, says J. C. Taylor, associate extension poultryman at the New Jersey College of Agriculture, Rutgers university.

The first step in controlling rats on a poultry farm is to establish a definite cleaning program so that the rats will not find suitable conditions for a home. Begin this program by cleaning all the buildings and removing all dumps and rubbish piles.

Poisonous baits give further protection against the rat menace, but the poison must be selected and used with care. Red squill powder is probably the most satisfactory. It is relatively harmless to human beings and domestic animals, but is sure death to rats. Mix one ounce of the red squill powder with enough water to form a paste and add it to one pound of meat, fish or cereal bait. Put the baits in places where the rats will find them easily.

Pullet Ration

The protein content of the pullet ration need not be so high as in the starting ration. Grain, protein supplement, minerals and vitamins must all be supplied for growing pullets but in somewhat different proportions than for chicks, says a writer in the Prairie Farmer. The all-mash chick starter can be converted into a very satisfactory growing mash by either increasing the amount of grain in the mash or by feeding whole or cracked grain in addition to the mash.

Commitments to the state penitentiary have increased from 413 for the biennium 1913-1914 to 877 for the biennium 1935-1936, a report of the state planning board entitled "A Survey of Penal and Reformatory Methods in Oregon," shows. The report also contains a detailed investigation of the penal system in Oregon and a number of recommendations for a constructive program for the future.

Knew Rockefeller's Father.
C. Gilbert of Hermiston has received a newspaper from Park River, N. D., which gives some interesting news of the father of John D. Rockefeller, who went by the name of Dr. Livingstone, at Park River and lived on a farm adjoining Mr. Gilbert's place. The paper states that the older Rockefeller in early life got into a jam in the east and beat the officers into Canada. There he changed his name to Livingston and later returned to the states in North Dakota. He had abandoned his family, one of which was later to become the richest man in the world, and after many years after his death his history was revealed by Ida Tarbell. This was the first information Mr. Gilbert had that he had spent many years a neighbor of the father of John D. Rockefeller.
