Things Go Awry.

Desperate deeds and conditions often lead to intensified actions. Banditry, like that at John Day, fires officers with great zeal in line of duty that may lead to impairment of judgment. The hair trigger of a pistol is no more dangerous than too quick conclusions. Officers are often put on the spot and they must need be geniuses not to fail at times. Innocent persons must be protected at all hazards and we grow impatient at slack enforcement, or too much enforcement. The public mind lik that of officers should keep well balanced for best results. Things do go awry sometimes, like the best laid plans of men and mice.

Marijuana, the Assassin.

Marijuana, the assassin of youth, is the new and dreaded menace to the United States. It is a weed that grows wild throughout this country the use of which is making dope addicts of thousands of young people.

Marijuana is a weed of the Indian hemp family, known in Asia as Cannabis Indica and in America as Cannabis Sativa. Almost anyone who has spent much time in rural communities has seen it, for it is cultivated in practically every state. It does not have to be imported but grows in the gardens and yards next door.

The narcotic is used in the form of a cigarette, comparatively new to this country, and is being pictured to the youth of our country by peddlers as giving a new thrill. It began with the whisper of vendors in the southwest that marijuana would perform miracles for those who smoked it, giving them a feeling of physical strength and mental power, stimulation of the imagination, and the weed's capabilities as a "love potion." Boys and girls were told that addicts may often develop a delirious rage during which they are temporarily and violently insane; that this insanity may take the form of a desire for self-destruction or a persecution complex to be satisfied only by the commission of some heinous crime.

In 1931, the marijuana file of the United States Narcotic Bureau was less than two inches thick, while today the reports crowd many large cabinets.

Because this drug traffic is making inroads upon our youth is the more reason why it is to be dreaded and a war waged against it.

We must squarely face the facts. There has been no law against the growing, sale or possession of marijuana. Every state except one has laws to cope with the traffic, and in June a bill was introduced in congress by Representative Robert L. Doughton of North Carolina, Chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, to give the federal government control over marijuana.

Every citizen need be alert and watchful. The condition calls for a campaign of education in every school, so that children will not be deceived by the wiles of peddlers, but will know of the insanity, the disgrace, the horror which marijuana can bring to its victims.

One incident is brought out: After smoking a "reefer" a youth walked down the street and suddenly imagined someone was threatening to kill him. In looking about the only person he saw was an aged bootblack. Drug-crazed nerve centers conjured the innocent old shoeshiner into a destroying monster. Mad with fright, the addict hurried to his room and got a gun. He killed the old man.

That's marijuana!

Every citizen has a responsibility in watching for any signs or effects from the drug in his or her community.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCHES
"SACRAMENT" was the subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, July 11.

The Golden Text was, "What are these which are arrayed in white robes? and whence came they? . . . These are they which came out of great tribulation, and have washed their robes, and made them white in the Blood of the Lamb" (Rev. 7:13, 14).

Among the citations which comprised the Lesson-Sermon was the following from the Bible: "And as they were eating, Jesus took bread, and blessed it, and brake it, and gave it to the disciples, and said, Take, eat; this is my body" (Matt. 26:26).

The Lesson-Sermon also included the following correlative passages from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "The disciples had eaten, yet Jesus prayed and gave them bread. . . . His followers, sorrowful and silent, anticipating the hour of their Master's betrayal, partook of the heavenly manna, which of old had fed in the wilderness the persecuted followers of Truth. Their bread indeed came down from heaven. It was the great truth of spiritual being, healing the sick and casting out error. Their Master had explained it all before, and now this bread was feeding and sustaining them. They had borne this bread from house to house, breaking (explaining) it to others, and now it comforted themselves" (pp. 32, 33).

That Reckless Spitter—

have you seen him? The one who spits all the time, everywhere? Next time, say to him frankly, "You're a menace to your community."

Years ago we began placing NO-SPITTING signs in our public places and conveyances. But how well is your local anti-spitting law being obeyed?

Remember that tuberculosis is spread effectively by reckless spitters.

Developing Pullets

A pullet that is being raised for a layer should have a gradual, uninterrupted growth. A pause in growth due to frequently empty hopper or dry fountain may mean a runt, and a runt means a pullet that was potentially a good layer but whose digestive capacity, laying capacity, was not developed to its highest degree, consequently she can never be an efficient assimilator of expensive feed and would better be sold.

SENSIBLE CO-OPERATION

by HOWARD McCOY
Published in the Country Gentleman

During the past two years a new idea of how to get rid of a current surplus of an agricultural commodity has come to the front in a surprising manner. The idea is to conduct a nation-wide merchandising campaign to feature the surplus product at a given time for the joint purpose of moving the surplus and of preventing a disastrous price break.

It involves co-operation between grower and the wholesale and retail distributor. It is helped along especially when farmers and producers are so organized that they can deal in large quantities with organized business.

There have been two major nation-wide campaigns to sell livestock products—beef in August, 1936, and lamb in January and February, 1937. In both cases chain stores, independent grocers, independent meat dealers and the meat-packing industry participated.

There has been a double-barreled campaign this year to sell grapefruit at the request of the producers. The first round was fired by chain stores and mainly concerned grapefruit sold for table use. The second was undertaken by the organized independent grocers and involved canned grapefruit and grapefruit juice.

During 1936 chain stores conducted their own special campaigns to sell canned peaches, California dried fruits, turkeys, walnuts and avocados.

Organized independent grocers this year undertook a National Rice Week advertising campaign, staged a National Cherry Week selling program and have plans under way for national cheese merchandising sometime this fall.

These nation-wide selling efforts, made possible by joining hands with organized producers, have in each instance so increased retail sales that both of the competing retail groups have recently taken steps through their trade organizations to make such sales efforts a permanent future policy.

The idea of merchandising a surplus agricultural product is not in itself a new one. Advertising by the producer co-operatives of such things as citrus fruits, apples, walnuts, prunes and the like is of course an old story. Nor is the idea of extensive sales campaigns at the same time by organized distributors something new.

John Kotal, secretary of the National Association of Retail Meat Dealers, Inc., of Chicago, tells me
