4-H CLUB NEWS

By Grace Benschel.

The members of the Happy Hour Cooking club are looking forward to the beginning of a new year's work, having enjoyed a very pleasant and profitable year, taking a keen interest in cooking, and learning new ways and methods for the kitchen. They also found new things about food values in meal planning.

Members were rewarded with many prizes when they exhibited 100% at the local fair and 70% at the 4-H club show in Pendleton.

At the beginning of the club year some of the members had had very little experience in the kitchen, but can now be a great help, if not prepare a meal, for the family.

Besides placing with cooking, the demonstration team, Grace Benschel and Jean McKenzie, won first at the Hermiston project fair and second at the county club fair. The girls demonstrated "Salads and Their Dressings."

The judging team, Mary Margaret Kennedy and Grace Benschel, received third place at Hermiston, the county fair having no judging contest for the clubbers in the home economics division.

The club enjoyed a good time when two birthdays were celebrated this summer, one being a beach party honoring Pauline Roach, and the other a swimming party in honor of Maxine Thompson.

At the close of this year's work the girls entertained interested local people with a very clever program. Much outstanding talent was shown.

The club members are looking forward to many more "Happy Hours" of work, making the best better, the 4-H way along with the new members who have become interested in this project. It has been requested that the Happy Hour Cooking club be continued next year.

Four members also finished sewing projects, winning at the various fairs. Two completed and received prizes in camp cookery; one member, Grace Benschel, completed the above projects as well as room improvement, home making, and flower gardening, placing in all but the last in which there was no class. She also served as club reporter.

The club officers were: President and Assistant Leader, Grace Benschel; Vice President, Mary Margaret Kennedy; Secretary, Fay Davis; Local Leader, Mrs. Wm. Benschel.

SCHOOLS OFFER CO-OP COURSES

(Co-op League News Service)

St. Paul, Minn.—The Minnesota State Legislature, at its special session this summer followed the lead of the Wisconsin legislature a year earlier and approved the teaching of courses in Consumers Cooperation and Cooperative Marketing in the elementary and secondary schools of the state. To make the measure effective it appropriated $5,000 to be used to prepare suitable outlines and study material.

Earlier in the year the North Dakota legislature approved a bill sponsored by the Farmers Union to make a course in Cooperative Studies elective in the high schools of the state. With the opening of school this fall Wisconsin students in high schools, vocational schools and colleges will begin their second year of cooperative study.

NEW FUNDS HERE TO AID FARMERS

Funds are again available for new rural rehabilitation loans to farm families without sufficient commercial credit to purchase needed livestock, farm equipment, feed, seed and other capital goods necessary to carry on their farming operations, announces R. S. Thompson, county supervisor, Farm Security Administration, U S D A, Federal building, Pendleton, Oregon.

Each applicant must be a bona fide farm family, and must be located on a productive farm capable of supporting the family and repaying the loan on the basis of an approved farm plan.

Applicants who are not owners of their farms, must have a satisfactory rent, lease or other tenure agreement.

Farm plans based on estimated livestock production and crop yields are worked out for each loan in cooperation with the county supervisor, to protect both the borrower and the loan. Farm and home plans also provide for producing a maximum of home food needs such as fruit, vegetables, meat, dairy products and eggs on the farm.

ECONOMIC ACTION BUSTS TRUSTS

(Co-op League News Service)

New York—"Sweden is attracting a great deal of attention today in the United States, not because of its physical beauty but because it has become the economic laboratory of the world". Anders Hedberg, spokesman for the Cooperative Union of Sweden, declared in an interview at the offices of The Cooperative League of the U.S.A. on arrival here for a two-month tour of American cooperatives.

After studying the effects of anti-trust legislation in the U.S., the Swedes decided to meet the problem of high prices by economic action in the formation of consumers cooperatives instead of by the passage of laws. Flour milling, margarine, rubber and electric light bulb trusts were broken when the co-ops built their own factories to manufacture these goods. "Swedish consumers are saving $300,000 a year on light bulbs alone as a result of this action", Mr. Hedberg said.

More than a third of Sweden's 6,000,000 population are members of cooperatives. Kooperativa Forbundet, of which Mr. Hedberg is secretary for international questions, distributes more than $100,000,000 worth of goods annually through 4,400 cooperative stores, serving consumers from Stockholm to the Arctic Circle.

"Although cooperative activities once precipitated wars, most of these have ceased because private business has learned it cannot kill the co-ops", Mr. Herberg said. "We believe in free competition and have re-acted it where the trusts once held the entire field. Our competition has forced private business to efficiencies which have brought lower prices and a higher standard of living for the entire country."

Mr. Herberg is accompanied on the trip by Mrs. Hedberg who has been active in cooperative and adult education work in Austria and Sweden. They will remain in the United States until November 20th, speaking to cooperative, educational, labor, business and professional organizations. They will go as far west as Minneapolis and Kansas City on the tour of American cooperatives.

POTATO GROWERS VOTE FOR AAA

Oregon commercial potato growers who took the trouble to vote in the recent referendum election called by the AAA are in favor of establishing goals under the 1938 farm program, although a comparatively small percentage of them took the trouble to vote. The unofficial total was 363 yes and 178 against, in the 18 Oregon counties which are classified as commercial potato areas.

In general the western Oregon counties were more in favor of the plan of setting up voluntary goals than were those in eastern Oregon. Among counties voting favorably were Clackamas, Columbia, Coos, Hood River, Lincoln, Washington, Yamhill, Linn, Baker, Malheur, Marion, Multnomah, Umatilla and Union. Voting against the plan were growers in Klamath, Lane and Crook counties, although the latter by only a one-vote majority.

The vote has been reported to Washington where returns from other producing states are being compiled. The AAA has announced that if a substantial majority is in favor of the plan it will be included in the 1938 agricultural conservation program. It would apply only to growers producing three acres or more and would be on a voluntary basis for them.

LOWER TURKEY NUMBERS FORECAST

A prediction made in the March 15 number of the Agricultural Situation and Outlook Report issued by L. R. Breithaupt, extension economist at Oregon State college, that fewer turkeys would be raised in 1937 than in 1936 is confirmed in government reports contained in the latest report just issued.

The 1937 turkey report of the government indicates a reduction of approximately 10 per cent in the number of turkeys on hand in the whole country, compared with a year ago. The decrease in the Pacific coast states was estimated at 6 per cent, and in the Rocky mountain states at 23 per cent. The crop is expected to be more nearly the size of those in 1933 and 1934 than either the small crop of 1935 or the large crop of 1936.

Indications are that the marketings will be somewhat earlier than last year. Turkeys are a national crop, being raised in every state in the Union, while heavy commercial production is found in the north, east, south and far west.

FARM RESEARCH HISTORY BOOKLET

The fiftieth anniversary of the establishment of the Oregon agricultural experiment station, and the experiment station system in the United States as a whole, has been commemorated through the issuance at Corvallis of an illustrated booklet, entitled, "The First Fifty Years."

Frankly modeled after some of the modern picture magazines, the new 28-page booklet tells the story of the growth of scientific agricultural research in Oregon, almost entirely in pictures and captions. It was designed and edited by John C. Burtner, extension editor, and printed on the O.S.C. press.

The main section of the booklet is devoted to a pictorial presentation of 15 of the most outstanding or closely related achievements of the Oregon station since its establishment. These are, without attempting to name them in the order of their importance, as follows:

Discovery of a successful method of removing spray residue from fruit; discovery of the cause and control of Bang's disease, development of the Oregon small seed industry, development of the system of breeding poultry for egg production, development of a practical method of brining cherries for the maraschino trade, detailed soil surveys and classification of major farming areas in Oregon, discovery of a new and simple method of fowl pox control.

Introduction of important grain varieties, research leading to the improvement of Oregon butter quality, development of new methods of storing, ripening and marketing Oregon pears; discovery of the life history and control of the codling moth under Oregon conditions, control of liver flukes in sheep and goats, development of supplemental irrigation in western Oregon, discovery of the value of sulfur as a fertilizer, and control of pear blight.

The booklet also contains a thumbnail chronological history of the station from the time of the passage of the Hatch act in 1887, which provided federal aid for agricultural experimentation, down to the present time. Pages devoted to current research feature among other things the successful work on the control of pea weevil. Headquarters buildings of the 10 branch stations are pictured, with brief statistical information about each station.
