YEARBOOK SHOWS PROGRESS OF CO-OPS

(Co-op League News Service) New York—Membership in cooperative associations throughout the world grew from 20,000,000 in 1917 to 70,500,000 in 1937, according to The People's Year Book for 1938, just published by the Cooperative Wholesale Society, Manchester. The statistics do not include the 38,300,000 members of cooperatives in rural sections of Russia or 35,000,000 members of urban co-ops absorbed by the Soviet government by decree in 1935.

The People's Year Book is widely known as the international handbook of the cooperative movement. It contains reports from cooperatives in 38 countries where the co-ops are affiliated with the International Cooperative Alliance. It also carries very complete reports of the activities of the English and Scottish cooperative movements. The Year Book is available in the United States through The Cooperative League of the U.S.A., 167 West 12th Street, New York.

STEEL WORKERS CONVENTION ENDORSES CONSUMER CO-OPS.

(Cooperative League News Service) PITTSBURG—The Steel Workers Organizing Committee, meeting here for its annual convention December 14, 15 and 16, unanimously endorsed the Consumers Cooperative Movement and urged its members to join consumer cooperatives "to protect the workers and their families, as consumers of goods, in terms of lower prices and higher quality of goods."

Interest in the cooperative movement on the part of unions in various parts of the steel territory was so great that four independent resolutions endorsing consumers cooperatives were presented. The final resolutions as adopted by the convention were as follows:

"WHEREAS, one of the fundamental reasons for organization of labor is to protect the workers from the abuse of employers and to insure a better standard of living for the workers and their families; and

WHEREAS, the labor organizations, fighting to make wages keep pace with the higher costs of living, discover that each wage increase is met with still higher living costs; and

WHEREAS, the workers organized as consumers function to keep prices down and the quality of goods high; and

WHEREAS, The Cooperative Distributors, Inc., is ready to serve trade unions and their families as a nation-wide purchasing and mail order association and The Cooperative League of the U.S.A. with its affiliates is working for consumer cooperation between labor, farmer and middle class groups;

NOW, THEREFORE, BE IT

RESOLVED, that this Convention endorses and supports the Consumers' Cooperative Movement, urging our members to join these Consumers' Cooperative organizations for the purpose of protecting the workers and their families, as consumers of goods, in terms of lower prices and higher quality of goods. The action of the Steel Workers Organizing committee is evidence of increasing support of the consumers cooperative movement by the ranks of organized labor. The S.W.O.C. is the first C.I.O. union to endorse the cooperative movement. The A.F. of L. endorsed the movement at its annual convention in 1936 and in 1937.

FAMED POULTRY SPECIALIST DIES

CORVALLIS—Dr. W. T. Johnson, poultry pathologist at Oregon State college, and known equally well by international scientists and the most humble Oregon poultryman, died here during the Christmas holidays at the age of 45. Dr. Johnson had been in ill health since last summer, finally succumbing to a malady that would not yield to treatment.

Two discoveries that brought world fame to Dr. Johnson and more profit to poultrymen everywhere were a new method of vaccinating for fowl pox and a practical method of controlling coccidiosis disease. Dean Wm. A. Schoenfeld, expressing keen regret at Dr. Johnson's passing said no arrangements for a successor have yet been considered.

1937 RECORD AG YEAR FOR OREGON

Cash income for Oregon farmers for 1937 will be the highest since pre-depression days and will approximate the previous peak year of 1929, according to a compilation made by L. R. Breithaupt, extension economist at Oregon State college, and based on latest government estimates and other data.

"Sales of crop and animal products from Oregon farms during 1937 will amount to between $130,000,000 and $140,000,000, which is more than double the cash farm income during the 1932-1933 low years and equal to the 1928-1929 peak period," says Breithaupt.

"Oregon's agricultural manufacturing and processing industries, such as mills, canneries, and milk products plants, will add perhaps $30,000,000 to $40,000,000 additional to the farm sales income, bringing the total agricultural income up around $160,000,000 to $170,000,000. This equals if not exceeds the previous high mark of $163,000,000 in 1929, which figure includes $34,300,000 credited to agricultural manufacturing, but does not include returns from specialty crops estimated in this year's totals. Without either manufacturing or specialty crop income the latest government estimates for this state are $127,811,000 for 1937."

Breithaupt calls attention to the growing importance of specialty crops in Oregon's income, even though milk production and wheat continue as the principal single items, with beef cattle, sheep and other livestock accounting for fully a fourth of the total. Tree fruits, nuts, small fruits and nursery crops together bring in about a fifth of the total.

Specialty crops include a half of all the hops produced in the United States, a large volume of eggs and fine baby chicks, and a turkey output that puts Oregon in the front rank of turkey growing states. Specialty crops often omitted from estimates include celery and other truck crops, field, garden and flower seeds; bulbs, peppermint oil, furs, and a great variety of nursery stock for both ornamental and commercial planting.

LAUNCH CO-OP HEALTH MAGAZINE

NEW YORK—To fill the demand for a publication of a magazine stressing cooperative health association, the Bureau of Cooperative Medicine, 5 E 57th Street, New York, is planning to launch a 32-page monthly publication. The magazine, "Cooperative Health," will be digest size and will appear not only to members of cooperative health associations but to farm, labor and cooperative groups as well as socially-minded doctors. Dr. Joseph Hirsh, former editor of the medical department of the Oxford University Press, will edit the proposed publication. Miss Mathilde Casanova has been appointed assistant editor. Miss Casanova comes to the Bureau from station WOR, the Social Security Board and the medical unit of the Civil Service commission.

"The magazine will be concerned primarily with the cooperative technique of health protection," according to Martin W. Brown, secretary of the bureau. "Stress will be held on preventive medicine. In addition to a news department on health problems effecting the consumer and the attempts being made to solve them, it will contain numerous articles on health subjects written in a popular vein by leading authorities."

Publication of "Cooperative Health" is planned for early spring. The subscription price will be $2 a year with a special rate for quantity orders to groups.

BATTLE WAGES OVER CO-OP MEDICAL LAW

Washington, D. C.—The battle between liberal and conservative elements in the medical profession grew in intensity this week as added reinforcements came to the defense of the Group Health Association which was organized a few months ago to enable employees of the Home Owners Loan Corporation to relieve the burden of the high cost of medical care.

Battle lines were drawn tighter around the co-op health association as Dr. Paul M. Pearson, of the National Housing Committee and former governor of the Virgin Islands, heading a group of prominent government officials, announced plans to extend a system of cooperative medicine to 40,000 federal workers. This group of government officials accused the District of Columbia Medical Society of attempting to wreck the cooperative health association by pressure on hospitals and congress.
