Dairyman Praises Manure Tank

TOLEDO — If the liquid manure tank installed last year on the Christiansen Dairy near Toledo continues to give the same results in the future that it has during the past fall, it will be the biggest one thing that has ever been done to improve the farm, Claus Christiansen told County Agent M. J. Conklin recently. He says the grass has been noticeably ranker and greener on that farm than on neighboring farms this fall, and stands of clover and grass have thickened. Mr. Christiansen believes the ideal way to seed grass is to sow the seed and give the ground a top dressing of liquid manure. He says he has also observed that pastures top-dressed with liquid manure do not seem to dry out as much as untreated fields.

MONEY IN THE SOCKETS

In view of the fact that the Rural Electrification association is now building a rural power line in the west end of Umatilla county, the following article on house wiring and its benefits may be of value to people whose farm homes come under the line, in directing proper and complete house wiring. The article was taken from the December issue of the McCalls.

By Kathleen Robertson

We say that most homes in America are so inadequately wired that they are costing their owners money. You don't see it?

Ah, there it is! If electricity were as visible as water you would see where and how much leakage was happening. And you would jump right in to correct it.

But electricity is silent and invisible. And, most annoying of all, it seems mysterious because no one has ever seen a current of electricity running along a wire. But it really has definite working laws.

Pushing Ahead.

For instance, we commonly speak of electricity as flowing along a wire. As a matter of fact, we would be more accurate if we said electricity pushed its way along a wire, using a certain amount of pressure, or voltage, in so doing. And, for a given amount of current, the smaller the wire the harder the current has to push and the more energy it expends along the way. The amount of current arriving at the outlets is the same as the amount leaving the meter box. But if house wiring is too small for the load it carries, current is such an enfeebled condition that it needs a long time to do its job.

In that case you might have to pre-heat your roaster forty minutes instead of thirty. Or your iron might never reach the temperature it should, so you would have to use it for a longer time. There are any number of ways in which languid current can cost money.

But how can one diagnose one's own wiring troubles? Frankly, very few house owners can, but there are a few symptoms that any one can recognize. For instance, do the lights dim when the refrigerator goes on? Are fuses blown with distressing regularity? Do all of the heating appliances seem slow? If the answers to these questions are affirmative, you'd better consult your utility or electrical contractor, because the wiring system needs adjustment of some sort.

The amount of money involved in that "some sort" will naturally depend upon the existing size of wire in the house, the number of circuits, and the uses to which you put electricity. If your house is more than five years old, very likely the wiring system is carrying too great a load.

Why Wiring Grows Old.

You will see why wiring systems are outgrown if you will consider the number of appliances you now have that were not even in existence ten years ago; the number that now use greatly increased wattage (1000-watt irons in place of 600-watt, for instance); and, in the interest of light saving, the tremendous increase of wattage in L.E.S. lamps.

In many cases of overloading, increasing the number of circuits will relieve the strain. Often no provision is made for the separate circuiting of appliances, though the demand of today's high-powered appliances causes much of the overloading.

Convenience outlets for dining room, breakfast room and kitchen should be on a separate circuit, using a heavier wire than that used for lighting circuits. There should also be a separate circuit for laundry equipment and, of course, one for the range. In a new house such circuiting can easily be arranged but even in an old house re-circuiting may often be accomplished at no great expense. In any case the outlay may be justified by increased efficiency of appliances and lamps.

When is a Convenience Outlet?

Size of wire and number of circuits may be difficult to visualize. But it is easy to visualize convenience and how it affects daily living. Take this matter of convenience outlets. You know they are called convenience outlets because they are supposed to be convenient to use. That is, there should be enough of them, and in places where appliances are logically used. There should be one near the kitchen working surface for the sole use of the mixer, another for the roaster or percolator. The breakfast room should certainly have a battery of appliance outlets, so coffee-maker, toaster, waffle iron, sandwich grill can all be used in one fell swoop for buffet suppers, refrigerator raids, and in the interest of painless breakfasts.

What this country needs are more wall outlets for lamps, so a trip across the living room will cease to come under the heading of the hazardous, with cords trailing in loops to catch the feet of the unwary. Trouble is we get used to cords and forget how ugly they are. All wall spaces should have enough outlets so women could indulge their inherited urge to push furniture around freely.

And How About Switches?

Do you have to grope your way into your own house after dark? Do you get black eyes from running into doors while trying to locate the kitchen light? Alas, inadequate wiring again! Of course, it is difficult to tell exactly how many switches you should have because the number and placement will depend on your house design and your way of living. But that expert we spoke of can survey your house, talk with you, then tell you what should go where.

We should really like to see home owners put as careful thought on the size of wire, circuiting, placement and number of convenience and wall outlets as they do on the selection of wallpaper or the placement of foundation planting.

After all, wiring is a fairly permanent job. You'll be living with it for some years. And manufacturers are always thinking up new uses for electricity. So build for future as well as present uses.

REGIONAL SEMINARS ON CO-OPERATIVES

(Co-op League News Service)
New York—The Committee on the Church and Cooperatives of the Industrial Division of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America announced this week that it will sponsor four Regional Sight-Seeing Seminars on Consumers' Cooperation this winter.

The first will be held at Columbus, Ohio, on February 3rd, at the close of the Ohio State Pastors Convention. E. R. Bowen, General Secretary of the Cooperative League of the U.S.A., will be the principal speaker at a special luncheon. A trip will then be made to the Ohio Farm Bureau Cooperative association building, its warehouse and local cooperative store and gas station. Later the Ohio Council of Churches is also planning to cooperate on a number of one-day seminars in a number of counties.

The second Regional Conference will be held at Washington, D.C., February 14 and 15. It will be a two-day Seminar with outstanding speakers on almost every phase of the cooperative movement and will be jointly sponsored by the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, the Social Action Department of the National Catholic Welfare Conference, and the Social Justice Commission of the Central Conference of American Rabbis. Delegates will be drawn from several hundred miles around Washington, including Baltimore and Virginia. Trips will be made to local cooperatives and to Greenbelt. This will be the first conference on cooperatives to be held under inter-faith auspices.

A New England Seminar under the auspices of another inter-faith committee is projected for Boston, February 27 and 28. Trips will again be made to local cooperatives and to Maynard, Mass. A fourth Seminar is being planned for the Central Atlantic States, probably at Madison, N.J. The date has not yet been determined upon. J. Henry Carpenter is chairman of the Committee on the Church and Cooperatives of the Industrial Division of the Federal Council, Leslie Bates Moss is vice president, and James Myers is secretary.

The Seminars are being planned on the model of the National Sight-Seeing Seminar on Consumers' Cooperatives held at Indianapolis two years ago under the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America, which was attended by leaders of all denominations from all sections of the country.

DRIVER-ASLEEP ACCIDENTS MANY

The driver who "falls asleep at the wheel", or who drives while his reactions are dulled by fatigue, may cause far more damage on the highway than the average person realizes. Secretary of State Earl Snell declared this week.

Snell said he wished to warn against fatigue because accidents of the "driver-asleep" type are nearly twice as apt to be fatal as ordinary accidents.

"Fatigue may also be deadly even though it does not produce sleep. Not only does fatigue make it hard for a driver to keep his attention on the road, but it slows him down in case of emergency.

2 WAY RELIEF FOR THE MISERY OF COLDS

Take 2 BAYER ASPIRIN tablets and drink a full glass of water. Repeat treatment in 2 hours.

If throat is sore from the cold, crush and stir 3 BAYER ASPIRIN tablets in 1/3 glass of water. Gargle twice. This eases throat rawness and soreness almost instantly.

All it usually costs to relieve the misery of a cold today — is 3¢ to 5¢ — relief for the period of your cold 15¢ to 25¢. Hence no family need neglect even minor head colds.

Here is what to do: Take two BAYER tablets when you feel a cold coming on — with a full glass of water. Then repeat, if necessary, according to directions in each package. Relief comes rapidly.

The Bayer method of relieving colds is the way many doctors approve. You take Bayer Aspirin for relief — then if you are not improved promptly, you call the family doctor.
