OREGON TO RACE UTAH IN CONTEST

SALEM—The Oregon committee in charge of this state's participation in the World's Poultry congress at Cleveland next year has challenged Utah to a race in selling affiliated memberships to the congress.

Additional plans for Oregon's participation were made at an executive committee meeting held here, called by Fred Cockell, Milwaukie, active chairman of the Oregon committee. Both Oregon and Utah have been given quotas of 2000 members which are sold at $1 each to poultrymen and others interested in the industry. Twenty-five per cent of the proceeds are retained for the Oregon committee to use and the remainder constitutes the chief source of funds for financing the World congress.

Charles S. Brewster of Portland, chairman of the membership committee, will be in charge of the sales in this state.

Many plans to make the Oregon participation in the congress a worthy representation of the poultry industry in this state were discussed by the executive committee. The next meeting of the full state committee is set for June 1 in this city.

Stanfield Grange Dance.

The Home Ec club of the Stanfield Grange will sponsor a dance April 9 at the Grange hall. The public is invited and music will be furnished by the Mountaineers. Admission will be 40 cents and 10 cents.

PEACE CONFERENCE ENDORSES CO-OPS FOR WORLD PEACE

(Co-op League News Service)
Washington, D.C.—The Conference on World Economic Cooperation, meeting here March 24 to 26, emphasized the importance of the consumer and consumer cooperatives as factors making for world peace, urged members of its affiliated peace organizations to study consumer organizations and the consumer cooperative movement, which it declared, "is itself a method for achieving peace", and to help increase the membership and influence of those consumer organizations that seem most promising.

Six hundred delegates, representing forty organizations affiliated with the National Peace Conference which called the convention, endorsed a report of its "Consumer Round Table", which said in part: "The consumer cooperative movement, with its local, national and international organization, based on democratic control by its members, and with the avowed aim of making possible a greater abundance for its members regardless of nationality, is itself a method of achieving peace.

"Since we believe that it is impossible to divorce international from domestic economic issues, we urge the importance of establishing a more effective relationship between all democratically controlled organizations which have consumer service as a part of their programs. This applies not only to outright consumer cooperatives but also to such organizations as labor unions, testing groups, housing, finance, health and insurance.

"Widening the area of such cooperation and relating it to the problems of world economic cooperation we regard as a part of that extension of the democratic process which is necessary to its continued survival."

E. R. Bowen, general secretary of the Cooperative League of the U.S. A. addressing the conference Thursday, March 24, pointed out that the consumers cooperative movement with its membership of one hundred million families in forty countries is one of the most important factors for maintaining world peace. "As American consumers interested in world peace," Mr. Bowen declared, "our efforts must start within the United States. We must organize to provide economic security for all of our people. When we do so, we will have made our greatest contribution toward international peace."

KNICKERBOCKER VILLAGE CO-OP GROWS UP IN THREE YEARS

(Co-op League News Service)
New York—Three years ago the officers of a Knickerbocker Village cooperative buying club took turns getting up at four o'clock in the morning to deliver cooperative milk to members of the struggling little co-op.

Nursed on co-op milk, the cooperative took on the distribution of tree-ripened oranges and grapefruit when it had grown to 35 members. In 1936 the co-op arranged for the use of a basement room in New York's largest dividend housing project and went into the grocery business. By fall it had taken on laundry distribution. In the beginning of 1937 the village cooperators launched their credit union and by the end of the year, when the officers took stock of their accomplishments, they found that the co-op had expanded to include 350 family members; that their non-profit business had grown to $30,000 a year and had paid healthy patronage refunds.

In the first week in April Knickerbocker Village Consumers Cooperative will move into a ground floor store, the largest in the village, launch a membership drive among the 1600 families in the housing project and take its place as one of the largest cooperatives in the metropolitan area.

FARM AND CITY CO-OPS LAUNCH JOINT INSURANCE PROGRAM

(Co-op League News Service)
New York—One of the most important enterprises ever backed by both farm and city cooperatives got underway Saturday, March 26 when Murray D. Lincoln, secretary of Ohio Farm Bureau Federation, addressed a cooperative rally here which marked the extension of co-op auto insurance to both farm and city consumers in N. Y. state.

The Farm Bureau Mutual Auto Insurance Co., the largest co-op auto insurance organization in the country, was organized by Ohio farmers 12 years ago. Mr. Lincoln told New York cooperators. Today it has more than a million dollars in surplus and five million dollar assets. It is insuring cooperators in 9 states, mostly in farming areas. The co-op is entering the N.Y. field under the sponsorship of the Eastern Cooperative Wholesale which serves co-ops in N.Y. and New England. Mr. Lincoln was introduced to the N. Y. co-op audience by Bruno Wagner, president of the Workmen's Mutual Fire Insurance Society, one of the oldest cooperatives in America.

MEDICAL ASSOCIATION OUSTS DOCTORS IN HEALTH CENTER

(Co-op League News Service)
Milwaukee, Wis. — Reaffirming the action previously taken by the Wisconsin State Medical Society, the Judicial Council of the American Medical Association has expelled the staff of the Milwaukee Medical Center on charges of "advertising", "solicitation" and "unethical conduct".

Founded three years ago when employees of the International Harvester Co. requested a group of doctors to provide them with medical care along voluntary health insurance lines, the Milwaukee Medical Center met immediate and continuous opposition from officials of the Milwaukee County Medical Society. Charges were filed against the physicians of the Center before organizational work was completed. When the Center's staff publicly refuted these charges, the County Society made the refutation itself the basis of the charge of "advertising". The State Medical Society affirmed the actions of the County Society in expelling the physicians and the case was appealed to the Judicial Council by the A.M.A. at its convention in June, 1937. The decision has just been handed down after a delay of ten months.

The Bureau of Cooperative Medicine revealed that it has been officially informed, by direction of the Judicial Council at its November, 1937, meeting that no definition of "advertising" or "conduct contrary to good public policy" had been set. Dr. Kingsley Roberts, medical director of the bureau, commenting on the case, said that medical societies should not take punitive action against physicians for conduct which had not been defined by the highest judicial body in the medical profession.

As a result of the action of the Medical Society against the Milwaukee Medical Center, pressure is expected from medical circles to prevent the admission of the Center's cases to Milwaukee hospitals. More than 1500 persons are members of the Center. Labor and progressive groups are rallying to its support.

Gaining Higher Heights

THE story is told by an aviator that once, during his course of training, he was compelled to effect a forced landing. His plane was wrecked and an investigation was held. Throughout the trying experience, there seemed to be much confusion and condemnation, but finally he was exonerated, and one of the superior officers said to him, "It is not the forced landings that count; it is how we rise and take off again." Afterward, as part of the discipline, he was compelled to repeat the full course. At first this was resented, but later he recognized that it was to his complete advantage, for in addition to the usual training, the extra months of practice and study gave him greater poise, knowledge, experience.

How many of us, in contact with fellow workers, with relatives and friends, and in daily endeavor to accomplish acceptable work in the world, often feel that we have failed, that we have fallen short of the high ideal which we have set for ourselves as a goal? Fear, doubt, discouragement, and injustice often seem to haunt our footsteps. Frustration and delay would baffle us. . . . Comparing our own progress with that of another, we may listen to the argument of defeat. And yet wherever we find ourselves, anywhere, in any place, Love can restore health, order, peace, and righteousness. God is Love always. He has never forsaken us. . . . The understanding of spiritual law discloses the nothingness of so-called material law and its claims. Failure and disaster come from ignorance of God's law; while health, prosperity, and progress are manifested as one gains the knowledge of the universal, impartial law of good. God knows only good for His children. . . .

A little girl used to walk and play so heedlessly that she was constantly falling and hurting herself, with tears and fretfulness as the inevitable result. She was taught this verse from the Psalms (116:8): "For thou hast delivered my soul from death, mine eyes from tears, and my feet from falling." Her child-thought accepted this so simply and practically that she was healed, and thereafter her days were filled with unfettered activity.

No outlook can be so dreary, no situation so sad, but Truth can rescue us and lift us to higher heights. Mary Baker Eddy writes (Science and Health, with Key to the Scriptures, p. 392): "Rise in the strength of Spirit to resist all that is unlike good. God has made man capable of this, and nothing can vitiate the ability and power divinely bestowed on man."

Serving God should be an inviting task attended by willing industry, happiness, and usefulness. It requires constant alertness and prayerful watching of our thinking, but this should be neither irksome nor distasteful. Doing good, loving God and man, is not a thankless, cheerless experience. On the contrary, and according to our astonishment, we find a capacity for joy, talent, freedom, and self-respect that never was known while we were following the selfish, fearful, material round of thinking. Serving God includes finding and serving a truer, higher sense of selfhood; of seeing man as the son of God. As one serves God he sees disease, discord, hate, and all temptation to sin, as falsehoods—lies which argue for themselves alone. These subtle claims are fabrications of mortal mind, without power or reality. They never touch God's son—the real man.

Mrs. Eddy writes (Miscellaneous Writings, p. 126): "Who hath not learned that when alone he has his own thoughts to guard, and when struggling with mankind his temper, and in society his tongue? We also have gained higher heights; have learned that trials lift us to that dignity of Soul which sustains us, and finally conquers them; and that the ordeal refines while it chastens."

From the human standpoint alone does the struggle to be Christlike seem to meet with ridicule, frustration, or defeat. Yet all such experiences teach us to guard our thoughts, our tempers, our tongues. They teach us to live with people amiably; and through these lessons we may grow in grace. Every seeming fall is of value, if, because of it, we seek and find God, and thereby our true selfhood, and learn to express more love to our neighbor. It is satisfyingly sweet to "rise again, stronger than before the stumble," and to attain in some measure to that "dignity of Soul which sustains us, and finally conquers."—The Christian Science Monitor.

Her Sea Shai Be Legion

NEW YORK, (Special).—Miss Liberty, of the statue in New York Harbor, is already playing in her newest role. An artist's impression of her graces the official seal of the New York World's Fair of 1939. Thus, from the vantage point of news columns, mail stickers and innumerable other decorated devices she carries the torch of invitation to every corner of the world and into every home in the United States.
