McCormick-Deering Two-Way Success Sulky Plow No. 1

Leaves No Dead Furrows

THE Two-Way turns all the furrows in the same direction—it leaves no dead furrows. It is, therefore, the ideal plow for irrigated fields and for sloping or hilly land where dead furrows mean undesirable ditches.

There is no laying out lands—you simply start at one corner of a field and plow back and forth, using the right-hand bottom going one way, the left-hand bottom coming back. It is very simple—the horses even do most of the work of raising the bottoms. Each bottom and beam is mounted on its own axle. The axle is in the form of a crank. There is a ratchet on each wheel and a dog in each axle assembly. To raise a bottom it is merely necessary for the plowman, by means of a hand grip, to cause the dog to engage the ratchet—the traction of the wheel does the rest.

See for yourself how well this plow is designed to do two-way plowing. Come in now while you are thinking about your farm equipment, and see the whole McCormick-Deering line.
