OREGON SEED LAW ENFORCED

A warning that retail dealers who sell seed to farmers and others for planting purposes are legally responsible for the correctness of the labels on the seed lots was issued this week by the State Department of Agriculture. The warning comes at a time when active enforcement of the new Oregon Seed Law is getting under way.

Tabulations completed by the department last week showed that 52 out of 114 seed lots tested up to that time were mislabeled in regard to the presence of noxious weed seeds. Thirty-six of 64 lots on which examinations had been completed were mislabeled in regard to germination. Even with relabeling, ten seed lots sampled could not be sold in Oregon because of the presence of prohibited weed seeds or noxious weed seeds over the allowable tolerance.

Those vendors who receive their seed from wholesale distributing firms are held jointly responsible with the firms for correct labeling, department officials said. All seeds, other than those certified, must carry labels on which ten different items are required by law.

Violations of these provisions in recent weeks have caused the State Department of Agriculture to issue warnings, and active prosecution is expected to begin soon.

ENGLISH CO-OP WHOLESALE MAKES CLOSED SHOP AGREEMENT WITH 33 UNIONS

(Co-op League News Service) Manchester, England—The Cooperative Wholesale Society has just concluded a contract with 33 trade unions covering the employment of 66,000 employees in the co-op wholesale and its affiliated productive works.

The blanket agreement sets up conciliation machinery, recognizes the principle of the closed shop and agrees to employ only members of trade unions approved by the Trade Union Congress.

The preamble of the agreement sets forth the principle that the relationship between the trade unions and the Cooperative Wholesale Society differs fundamentally from the relationship between the trade unions and private enterprise. The Cooperative News reports that it is therefore understood and provided for in the agreement that the trade unions will give the cooperative immunity from stoppages of work arising from inter-union disputes respecting the trade union membership of its employees. The trade unions also agree to assist the cooperative against unfair trade competition by doing everything possible to raise the wages and conditions of employment in firms competing with the co-op who are paying less wages for the same type of labor.

Conciliation machinery is already in operation covering the 119,000 employees in retail cooperatives. The new agreement will set up similar machinery covering employees of C.W.S. The right to strike or lock-out is not prohibited but no such action may be taken until disputes have been submitted to a conciliation board consisting of six representatives of the trade union or unions concerned, six representatives of the co-op wholesale and an independent chairman.

After seven years of experiments, the University of California has devised a way of making a crushed peach product of small clingstone peaches at reasonable cost, thereby putting these surplus peaches to new use.

"PROFIT EPOCH DYING"

WARBASSE TELLS CENTRAL STATES CO-OP CONGRESS

(Co-op League News Service) Detroit—Declaring that "this profit-making epoch is coming to a close" and that "the plan of business which neglects the consumer has spelled its own disintegration" Dr. James P. Warbasse, president of the Cooperative League of the U.S.A., urged delegates to the annual congress of the Central States Cooperative League, meeting here April 24, to add to their extensive activities new enterprises such as cooperative housing, medicine and burial service.

The League, now 13 years old, is the educational organization serving 65 urban consumer cooperatives in Illinois, Indiana, Ohio and lower Michigan, with more than 12,000 individual members.

The Cooperative Wholesale, Chicago, which serves cooperatives affiliated with the co-op league, held its annual meeting here April 25. A. W. Warinner, manager, reported that the wholesale, which was organized 2 years ago with $900 capital and 18 members, handled $95,000 worth of goods last year. The board of the wholesale voted to continue the present practice of descriptive labeling and to pay member retail co-ops a patronage dividend of 1 per cent. on goods purchased during the past year.

NOVA SCOTIA CO-OPS DESCRIBED IN NEW PAMPHLET.

(Co-op League News Service) New York—The program of St. Francis Xavier University, often termed "the most important program of adult education on the North American Continent" is described in a new pamphlet, "A Tour of Nova Scotia Cooperatives", just published by the Cooperative League of the U.S.A.

The pamphlet contains articles by Dr. M. M. Coady, Dr. J. J. Tompkins, A. S. MacIntyre, William Feltmate and other leaders of the Nova Scotia cooperatives plus comments on the program by several American educational and religious leaders who were members of a party of 91 that visited Nova Scotia last summer. Copies of the pamphlet can be secured for 20 cents from the Cooperative League, 167 W. 12 St., New York.

ROBERTS URGES MEDICAL PROFESSION TO HEED LAY OPINION

(Co-op League News Service) New York—Organized medicine must give due consideration to the desires and rights of the lay public in their search for adequate medical care, Dr. Kingsley Roberts, Medical Director of the Bureau of Cooperative Medicine, urged in an address before the Society for Medical Jurisprudence at the N. Y. Academy of Medicine, May 9.

Dr. Roberts stated that lay thought in the field of medical economics was far outdistancing that of the profession. "While many leaders of the profession have been holding forth that all is well with medicine and that people can and do receive all of the care that they need," he said, "important lay bodies have been carefully studying the situation and have arrived at the inescapable conclusion that the present method of distributing medical services is woefully inadequate. These lay groups recognize that the free-for-service system of purchasing medical care presents an unsurmountable barrier to the receipt of needed medical attention and are now taking the next step. They are organizing to do for themselves what organized medicine will not do for them."

Dr. Roberts warned that unless the attitude of organized medicine gives due consideration to lay opinion there will be an open fight between the consumers of medical services and the leaders of the producers.

STUDENT CO-OP LEAGUE OF THE PACIFIC COAST LAUNCHED AT COLLEGE MEETING

(Co-op League News Service) Moscow, Idaho—Representatives of cooperative housing associations on five campuses in four far western states met here during spring vacation to pool their experiences in "campus co-ops" and to take steps to establish a Students' Cooperative League for the Pacific Coast.

The action came as the climax of a two day meeting in which student representatives pointed out that their co-ops have become the largest student living organizations on their campuses and have a total membership of 2,000. The student co-ops do an annual business of $210,000 with savings to members of more than $150,000.

The cooperatives in most cases were organized during the early depression years as a move to cut the costs of living and have continued because they make possible democratic group life to students with moderate budgets.

The cooperatives at the University of Idaho, organized in 1932, now operate seven campus dormitories. The Student Cooperative Association at the University of Washington includes ten co-op houses and a central kitchen. There are four housing co-ops at the University of Oregon and four at Washington State College and three co-ops at the University of California, one of which has taken over the largest apartment building in Berkeley as a co-op dormitory.

Speakers at the conference included President C. Dale of the University of Idaho and several educational and cooperative leaders in the Pacific Northwest.

20 CO-OP COLLEGE STUDENTS BEGIN LABORATORY WORK IN CO-OPS AS COURSE ENDS

(Co-op League News Service) New York—The Cooperative League Institute, a cooperative college for the training of prospective executives and educational directors, wound up its second term May 13 when 20 students completed their three-month academic training and went into the field for two months "laboratory work" in cooperatives throughout the country.

Students were assigned to co-ops from Caldwell, Idaho, to Greenbelt, Maryland, and will do all types of work during their training period. This was the second class to complete its academic work at the college here. Practically all of the original class have already secured positions in co-ops according to Lionel Perkins, registrar. Applications are being received for the fall session which opens Sept. 26.

SEED PRODUCTION PROMOTES CROP ROTATION SYSTEM

(Continued from Page One) rigate alfalfa during the time the seed is setting, farmers may get a heavier yield, due to the fact that irrigation at this time causes new shoots to start and immediately seed setting ceases. The Butter Creek area should fit into this type and be developed into a good seed producing district.

Red clover may be planted in the spring and seed crop taken from it the same year. Mr. Jackman says, however, in some sections clover seed is sown into the stubble after a grain crop has been harvested in September. Two crops from one field in one season have been secured, but the usual practice is to cut a hay crop first and then a seed crop later.

Practically all of the Ladino clover seed on the market is produced in Oregon, states Mr. Jackman, but it is like many other products, there is a staple demand for the seed which is not likely to increase rapidly. A small increase might tend to cause a drop in the market price.

Bulbous Blue Grass.
 Walter Holt, county agent from Pendleton, stated that there was a possibility that Bulbous Blue grass would replace cheat grass in sections of Umatilla county. The grass will grow readily once it is seeded and spreads rapidly without special care. It is now found at Milton-Freewater, Helix and Pendleton.

Mr. Holt believes that certain seed crops could be made profitable to farmers here by specializing in certain varieties best suited to the various types of soils.

Study Alfalfa Fields.
 A tour of alfalfa fields in this section was made Wednesday by a party consisting of W. L. Westover, of the U. S. Department of Agriculture, Mr. Jackman, H. K. Dean, superintendent of the Umatilla field station, Mr. Holt and Mr. Pierson. Hardestan, Turkestan and Ladak were suggested as the most will resistant varieties for this section.

Refreshments were served by the ladies of the Umatilla Project Farm Bureau at the close of the meeting.
