4-H SUMMER SCHOOL ACTIVITIES

By GRACE BENSEL.

Many parents and friends were at the depot in Stanfield last Friday to welcome 4-H clubbers home after a two weeks club summer school at Corvallis.

There were 36 boys and girls from Umatilla county who attended the summer school. Boys from this end of the county taking part and placing among the first ten in the crops judging were Kenneth Bensen, Eugene Rugg and Henry Sommerer Jr., and in the livestock judging Bob Jackson, Bob Bensen and Chas. Kik.

The 4-H clubbers left Stanfield on a special train June 6, and arrived at 5:46 p. m. The evening was spent registering, obtaining rooming quarters and getting settled.

The next morning the girls met and were divided according to age, and from there into groups of 15 girls. The girls then met leaders in the first class of the 1938 session of the 24th annual club summer school. Leaders were also chaperones from the various counties. Each morning the time was divided into group periods, but some classes took more than one period.

The girls' program consisted of home economics classes such as learning recipes for salad, bread making, canning, and nurses training. The boys centered their activities around livestock.

Every afternoon an assembly was held at 2:00 o'clock which was followed by a recreational period. This was elective but the majority of students took part in baseball, swimming and various other sports.

In the evening moving pictures were enjoyed or a regular program. Delegates could attend either the formal dance or a party on the final night on the campus.

A leader's breakfast was held every morning in the Memorial building for the 200 leaders conducting the classes. There were 1000 girls and 800 boys enrolled, making a total of 1800 club members and the 200 leaders.

This year's enrollment is the largest in any state this side of the Mississippi river. Clubbers pledged to continue "Making the Best Better."

FARM NEWS FROM THE STATE DEPT.

Dairymen who inoculate their herds with live organism vaccine in the hope of curing bovine Bang's disease will lose their market for raw milk for human consumption, according to a warning just issued by the State Department of Agriculture.

The preparation is advertised as a cure for Bang's disease and department representatives have found some dairymen using it recently, says Dr. W. H. Lytle, state veterinarian. Financial loss has resulted. County veterinarians are compelled by law to serve notice on the owners of herds vaccinated with the live organism that the raw milk produced cannot be sold for human consumption. In addition, herds vaccinated are not eligible for federal and state testing and indemnity payments within a period of one and one-half years after inoculation.

Most animals which have been recently vaccinated with the preparation will show up as reactors, according to officials. Some even react permanently.

A centralized, modern butterfat-testing laboratory will soon be in operation in the Portland milkshed, the State Department of Agriculture announced. Equipment is now being installed in a building leased for the purpose at 14th and East Stark streets, Portland.

The laboratory is the result of a year-long dispute between producers and distributors in the area. Producers claimed that they were not getting accurate tests, according to officials, and both sides to the argument finally appealed to the State Department of Agriculture to set up the laboratory and take active supervision.

Funds for the establishment of the laboratory and its maintenance have been taken from the milk pool of Portland. Half the expenses will be paid by producers and half by buyers of milk.

It is estimated that 5,000 samples will be tested each month when the laboratory begins mass operations about July 1. Four licensed milk and cream testers will be employed.

The technical operations of the Babcock test, as outlined by G. H. Wilster, of Oregon State College, will be strictly adhered to, the department says, in order that the highest accuracy may be achieved. Milk samples will be made up over 7 or 8-day periods.

Oregon ranks second highest among the states in having the largest percentage of breeding cattle under official supervision for Bang's disease, according to figures released by the State Department of Agriculture. Virginia is first with 79 per cent of her breeding cattle under supervision; Oregon has 75 per cent.

The State Department of Agriculture announced this week that continued vigorous enforcement of the new Oregon seed law would be a major center of its regulatory work during the next few months.

Tabulations of the first three months of sampling and testing of seed lots on the Oregon market have shown a high percentage of mislabeling which, officials declare, constitutes the major enforcement problem at present. Labels must be correct in order to protect the farm buyer of agricultural, vegetable and turf seeds, they say. Wholesale distributors of these seeds have promised active cooperation in the drive to raise the standards of seed and meet the legal labeling requirements.

Of 164 samples which had been taken by State Department of Agriculture district representatives during the period, more than 54 per cent were found to be mislabeled in regard to the amount of noxious weed seeds present. In 37 per cent of the cases, germination was below the percentage specified on the labels.

A complete list of the stallions registered for service in Oregon is included in the official State Department of Agriculture monthly bulletin for June, according to Dr. W. H. Lytle, chief of the division of animal industry.

Two hundred and two purebred, grade and mongrel animals are listed from all sections of the state. Licensing requires that the stallions be examined and passed as being physically sound.

The list may be obtained by writing to the State Department of Agriculture, Salem.

CATTLE PAYMENTS REVISED

The Act making appropriations for the Department of Agriculture for the fiscal year beginning July 1, 1938, contains a provision for the payment of Federal indemnity to owners of tuberculous or paratuberculous cattle or cattle reacting to the test for Bang's disease, according to information just received by the county agent from Dr. Sam B. Foster, Inspector in Charge, Tuberculosis Eradication Division, Bureau of Animal Industry at Portland.

The letter goes on to state that under the provisions of this act, the amount of the federal payment shall not be more than one-third of the difference between the appraised value of the animal and the salvage and shall in no instance exceed $25.00 for grade cattle or $50.00 for registered pure bred cattle.

The act further provides that for cattle slaughtered on and after May 1, 1939, the federal payment shall not exceed the amount paid or to be paid by the state, territory, county, or municipality cooperating in the work.

In view of the above, it will be necessary to enter into a new agreement with the herd owner in the Bang's disease project after June 30, 1938, and each owner should be informed regarding the change in the method of computing indemnity claims prior to the time his cattle are tested. You will receive further information regarding the change in the agreement and regulation within a short time.

In regard to cases where cattle are appraised during the present fiscal year but not slaughtered until on or after July 1, 1938, you are advised that the method to be followed in computing such claims is not definitely known at this time, but it is deemed advisable and would probably be to the best interest of owners who have reactors appraised this fiscal year to have them slaughtered on or before June 30, 1938, as far as possible.

SECOND MODEL TOWN WILL HAVE NOTHING BUT COOPERATIVE STORES

(Co-op League News Service)
 Cincinnati, Ohio—The model town of Greenhills, suburban housing project on the outskirts of Cincinnati, will operate all of its commercial enterprises as cooperatives according to an announcement by Henry Wallace, secretary of agriculture, made public by the Farm Security Administration.

A cooperative self-service food store, general store, drug store, service station and garage, barber shop and beauty parlor are planned and leases have already been signed with Greenhills Consumer Services acting for the residents of Greenhills.

Greenhills Consumers Service, Inc., an Ohio cooperative organization operating under Rochdale principles, was set up by prominent members of the United Cooperatives of Cincinnati in cooperation with Consumer Distribution Corporation to establish stores and other services and to operate them on a non-profit basis. Two hundred families are already in the community, as the other residents move in they will elect directors to replace the present trustees. The profits on the operation of the stores and services will be distributed to members of the cooperative according to their patronage.

Consumer Distribution Corporation, established by the late Edward A. Filene, has been successfully operating the retail stores at Greenbelt, Maryland, under a similar arrangement since last September.

FIRST ISSUE OF CO-OP HEALTH MAGAZINE TO APPEAR IN JULY

(Co-op League News Service)
 New York—The first issue of "Cooperative Health", the official monthly journal of the Association of Medical Cooperatives will appear early in July. The new health magazine will contain articles by Dr. James P. Warbasse, president of The Cooperative League, Dr. Kingsley Roberts, medical director of the Bureau of Cooperative Medicine, Prof. C. E. A. Winslow of Yale University School of Medicine, Dr. C. Rufus Rorem, Group Hospitalization authority, Arthur Kallet, managing director of Consumers Union, and others. The subscription rate for the magazine is $2.00 per year. In combination with the weekly news bulletin of the Association of Medical cooperatives, the rate is $3.00 per year, representing a saving of $1.00.

AMERICAN PEOPLE WANT TO BUDGET MEDICAL COSTS

(Co-op League News Service)
 New York—The American Institute of Public Opinion in announcing the results of its latest poll this week revealed that the majority of the American people would be willing to pay for medical care on a periodic payment basis and that about one in three would pay $2.00 a month per person. The poll further revealed that 42 per cent of those questioned had put off going to the doctor at some time because of the cost. The announcement said, "Comments show that persons would favor a plan for group medical care, 'it would help us budget doctors' bills'".

Martin W. Brown, secretary of the Bureau of Cooperative Medicine, commenting on the poll said that it indicated nation-wide approval of cooperative medicine. "Cooperative medicine means the budgeting of medical service and it has been the experience of cooperative health associations that where medical care is paid for on such a basis members will seek the doctor's services earlier than if they had to pay for it on a 'fee for service' basis. The survey of the American Institute shows the potentialities of cooperative medicine. With this tremendous vote of approval Cooperative Health associations will move forward more rapidly."

While this poll revealed that a majority of the lay public favors a system which would remove the financial hazards of illness, and permit the early diagnosis of disease, the magazine "Modern Medicine" announced that a tabulation of votes in its referendum on "Socialized Medicine" revealed that 65 per cent of the doctors were against any reorganization of the medical profession. Lines were drawn tighter between the lay public and the medical profession, when, according to "Modern Medicine's" referendum 84 per cent of the physicians expressed approval of the present status of the American Medical Association.

A sharp note of criticism was raised, however, when Dr. S. S. Goldwater, New York State Commissioner of Hospitals reporting to the Council of the American Hospital association, took issue with the AMA's policies and said, "the fight of the AMA against group practice, if successful, would lead to the development of such intolerable conditions under a multiple fee system that it would give impetus to the demand for state control of hospital medical practice."
