TRAVEL BUREAU AIDS WESTERN SHOW

Having spent several millions of dollars in creating Treasure Island, backed up by an appropriation of $1,500,000 for a federal exhibit at the Golden Gate International Exposition on San Francisco Bay, Uncle Sam now is pitching in to help bring people to the 1939 World's Fair of the West, and to encourage them to "See All the West in '39".

Through the newly organized United States Travel Bureau, operated by the National Park Service, the federal government is preparing to lend a helping hand to Americans who believe in seeing America first.

It marks the first time that our government has gone in for tourist promotion on a broad scale, although many European nations have had government travel bureaus for many years.

While the new Travel Bureau was not organized especially to assist the Golden Gate International Exposition, its activities in the west have been speeded up by reason of the world's fair.

Said J. R. Anderson, supervisor of the New York office of the bureau: "We have rushed our plans for a western office in order to assist the people of the western states in making their Golden Gate International Exposition a success. Eastern people will want to see the scenic attractions of the west as well as the Exposition, and we believe that we can help in this big travel program."

That "big travel program" is the coordinated Western States travel promotion plan launched by the Exposition more than a year ago, in which the western states, railroads, travel agencies and others interested in tourist promotion have been brought together in a major effort to attract visitors to all the west.

It is encouraging to hear that the government is joining in this movement to make 1939 the greatest travel year in western history.
